Kuchel Chosen Republican Whip Giving Insurgent Group More Prestige in Upper House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —The new Eighty-sixth Congress convened today already torn by wrangling over Republican leadership posts and the ground rules for a looming new battle on civil rights.

Senate Republicans had just come from a party caucus where the Old Guard put down an insurgent rebellion and named as party floor leader Senator Everett M. Dirksen, a 1952 supporter of the late Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. By a similar 20-to-14 vote, Senator Thomas H. Kuchel of California was chosen whip or assistant floor leader.

House Republicans were split right down the middle as the result of a scrap yesterday that saw Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts ousted as party leader after 20 years at the helm. Named to replace him was Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

Senators of both parties were taking sides for a possibly prolonger battle over that body's rules. The issue: Whether to make it less difficult to cut off filibusters—the endless debate that backers of more federal protection for Negro voting rights have contended is the main weapon used to defeat such legislation.

House Democrats at Peace.

Only House Democrats, tightly under control of Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, were without any raging feuds for the moment. Rayburn, who has served as Speaker longer than any other man, was chosen again at a party caucus yesterday. It put him in the presiding chair of the House for a ninth two-year term.

Actually, the party only nominated. But the overwhelming strength of the Democrats made today's election by the House itself only a formality.

Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas was re-elected Senate Democratic majority leader at a party meeting just before the Senate convened. He has held the post since 1953.

Johnson described the Democratic conference as harmonious with no discussion of such matters as Senate rules on which the Democrats are divided.

Hennings Re-elected.

Also re-elected by the Democrats were Senators Carl Hayden of Arizona, the dean of the Congress, as Senate president pro tem; Mike Mansfield of Montana, as whip, and Thomas C. Hennings of Missouri, as secretary of the Conference of Democratic Senators. It was the fourth time Hennings had been chosen secretary.

Halleck Victory Over Martin Laid to Drive by Young Men

New G.O.P. Leader in House a Resourceful Professional—Alford Allowed to Take His Seat.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 — Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana took over as House Republican minority leader in the new Congress today, ending the 20-year leadership reign of Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts.

Martin, 74 years old and ailing, went down before a surprise assault of younger men bent on rebuilding the party for the 1960 elections. The secret-ballot vote in the closed party conference late yesterday was 74 to 70.

No political ideology was involved. As a cynical Capitol official put it, recalling recent Republican defeats: "They lost the game so they fired the coach."

The effect Halleck's election will have on legislation to be enacted this year was not clear. Halleck has been an adhesive influence on the coalition of conservative Republicans and Southern Democrats that has dominated Congress. The coalition could be strengthened by his election, but may not be because of Halleck's ambition. He is thought to be seeking the vice presidential nomination in 1960.

Representative Dale Alford, an avowed segregationist from Little Rock, Ark., was allowed to take his seat in the House by an overwhelming vote. House members ignored the recommendation of a special elections committee that Dr. Alford be barred because of charges that "corruption and fraud" marked his write-in victory.

A move to ask Dr. Alford to step aside pending a full investigation was shouted down and he took his oath of office two minutes after the rest of the House members were sworn in en masse.

Earlier, Alford had voted with other Democrats for Sam Rayburn of Texas as Speaker. For all practical purposes, that established Alford as a Democrat.

Martin said President Eisenhower did not intervene in the leadership dispute, but he asserted that several weeks ago

ROCKET IN ORBIT AROUND THE SUN, RUSSIA REPORTS

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Soviet space rocket went into orbit around the sun today and became the first artificial planet of the solar system, Moscow radio said tonight.

The broadcast said the rocket has covered a distance of 14,500,000 kilometers (9,062,500 miles) since it was launched from a base in the Soviet Union last Friday.

All radio contact with the rocket has been lost since Monday. The Soviet Union has given no indication of how it could tell when the rocket would go into orbit around the sun.

Its curving path through space as it veered into orbit around the sun leaves it 1,000,000 kilometers (625,000 miles) from the earth, the broadcast said.

U.S. SAID TO HAVE SEIZED $17,000,000 FROM CUBAN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UPI) —The United States Government has impounded $17,000,000 brought into this country by a fleeing pro-Batista Senator, informed sources said today.

The sources said the money was taken to Key West, Fla., by Senator Rolando Masferrer when he fled from Cuba in his private yacht after the fall of dictator Fulgencio Batista Jan. 1.

The sources said the United States Government had impounded the funds, all in cash, until the legal status of the money is determined.

Masferrer, one of Batista's stanch supporters, was reported to have had a private army which was used both in Oriente province and in Havana against the rebels.

A group of his supporters holed up in a public building in Havana on Friday and engaged in a last-ditch fight with rebel elements of the Fidel Castro movement.

FAVORS USE OF POOL HALL TO COMBAT DELINQUENCY

BALDWIN PARK, Calif., Jan. 7 (UPI)—Police Chief Louis Ben Torres has indorsed a proposal to lower from 18 to 16 years the minimum age at which a boy can enter a pool hall.

"It might take a few kids off the street and give them some form of activity," he told the City Council.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN CAR ON COLUMBIA AVE., NECK BRUISED

Auto Found Parked Near Home Where Party Was Held to Which She Had Been Invited.

The body of Mrs. Charles E. Montague, 3261 Suson court, was found today in her automobile in the 4900 block of Columbia avenue. The car was parked near a home where a sorority party she had planned to attend was held last night. She was 32 years old.

The body was on the floor in front of the rear seat. There was a cut on the left thigh and bruises and scratches on her neck.

Police said she apparently had been killed.

The cause and time of death had not been determined this afternoon.

The party, attended by members of Phi Mu, a social sorority, was at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Brookman, 4940 Columbia.

Mrs. Montague was a social worker for the state welfare office at 1704 Washington avenue. She attended Washington University for three years, taking courses in journalism.

She and her husband have two children, Charles D. Montague, 10 years old, and Linda Ann, 9. Montague, 34, is studying to be a medical technologist at the Gradwohl Laboratories.

Montague told a reported his wife, the former Ruth Ann Jones, left home at 7:15 o'clock last night to attend the meeting of Phi Mu.

The gathering broke up between 10:30 and 11 o'clock, police were told. Mrs. Brookman told a reporter Mrs. Montague left the party about 10 o'clock.

Her purse was on the front seat of the car, but preliminary investigation did not establish whether any money had been taken from it.

The body was found at 11:20 a.m. today by Mrs. Montague's brother, Donald Jones, 3216 January avenue. Her mother, Mrs. Harvey D. Jones, and her husband had enlisted his help in a search for her when she had not returned home last night.

Montague told a Post-Dispatch reporter he fell asleep last night when awaiting his wife's return. He said she usually gets back from sorority meetings about 10:30 o'clock. Montague said he awakened at 2:15 a.m. today, became alarmed on finding his wife had not returned, and called his mother-in-law. Montague notified police his wife was missing shortly after 7 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Brookman told police she noticed the car that turned out to be Mrs. Montague's parked in front of her home as she was cleaning up after the party, as late as 1 a.m., but thought nothing of it. It was not unusual for cars to be parked on the street there all night, she said.

Mrs. Louise Dickson Stark, a leading member of the sorority, told the Post-Dispatch she recalled Mrs. Montague being present at the affair. She said Mrs. Montague had parked her car on a driveway, and entered it alone srortly after 10 p.m. She must have driven it from the driveway, Mrs. Stark said, because another automobile whihc would have been blocked by Mrs. Montague's car drove away a few moments later.

ATROCITIES LAID TO BATISTA MEN FOUND IN CUBA

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The bearded, 32-year-old revolutionist is advancing toward Havana, his progress slowed by dynamited bridges and even more by popular demonstrations at every village and town.

The atrocity details became known with the opening of police stations and military posts to the public.

Santa Clarans together with many Habaneros who have driven the 200 miles from Havana to meet Castro's triumphal caravan, examined torture implements used by Batista's men to interrogate political prisoners.

More than 100 political prisoners were liberated here in the five-day battle for Santa Clara that ended New Year's day with the flight into exile of President Fulgencio Batista.

Bodies of many others were found where they had been starved, beaten or tortured to death, or in some cases buried alive. Three dead prisoners were found with their mouths sewn shut with wire.

(United Press International said rebel forces discovered 57 bodies in a mass grave at Santa Cruz del Norte, near Havana. The dead were believed to be victims of a Batista police massacre, UPI said.)

In nearby Cienfuegos, a man was found nailed to a cross with his dead wife at his feet. The man was still alive, although he weighed only 60 pounds, as the incident was reported here.

Among the torture devices on display at the central police station in Santa Clara were several fingernail pullers—heavy blocks of iron the size

BRITISH SAILORS LOSE IN BIDDING ON BARDOT STATUE

LONDON, Jan. 7 (UPI)—A life-sized plastic statue of French actress Brigitte Bardot was sold to a publicity man yesterday to the disappointment of the crew of a British aircraft carrier.

The statue depicts the actress in the bottom half of a bikini with her arms folded modestly across her bosom. It is made of flesh-colored plastic and crowned with a long wig of human hair.

It was sold for an undisclosed sum to S. Tenner and was taken to Manchester to advertise a film there. The owner of a London movie house had put it up for sale after it had outlived its usefulness.

The crew of the carrier Eagle had bid for the statue.

FIVE-DAY FORECAST: NORMAL TEMPERATURES, SOME RAIN EXPECTED

NEAR normal temperatures are expected in the St. Louis area for the next five days, with wet weather expected tomorrow and Saturday, the Weather Bureau said today in its extended forecast.

The forecast: Mostly cloudy during the next five days with day-to-day temperatures averaging near normal; precipitation is likely tomorrow and again about Saturday; normal highs range from 36 to 40 degrees and the normal lows in the low 20s.

For That Girl in Every Port: Powder Rooms on New Carrier

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)— The big new aircraft carrier Independence has everything—including women's powder rooms.

Several of these have been installed in the giant vessel to be commissioned Saturday at the Brooklyn Naval Shipyard.

This does not mean that there are going to be women in the crew, but just that the Navy thinks of everything. The powder rooms are for the comfort of the women who visit the ship in port.

The crew is going to have it pretty nice too. There are walls of pastel green and pleasing hues of floor coloring in the sleeping quarters, pullman-type bunks and individual fluorescent lamps for each crew member, air conditioning, television, porcelain washstands and foam rubber mattresses.

In some of the lavatories hot air blowers will be used for drying hands.

The 60,000 ton warship, costing $190,000,000, has been under construction three and a half years. Its four-acre flight deck is big enough to hold the luxury liners America and United States with room to spare.

BLAIR ASKS LEGISLATURE TO BOOST STATE TAXES BY $46,500,000 A YEAR

Would Jeopardize Move to Remove St. Louis Ceiling, Municipal Officials and Legislators Say.

Removing the St. Louis earnings tax ceiling will be seriously jeopardized if the Board of Education carries out a plan to seek power to levy a separate earnings tax, St. Louis officials and legislators said today.

Comptroller John H. Poelker, who is in Jefferson City with other city officials to push St. Louis's legislative program, expressed regret that a committee of the school board is considering the new earnings tax proposal.

"It will cloud the situation and certainly hamper our efforts to get the General Assembly to remove the ceiling of one-half of 1 per cent," Poelker remarked.

The property tax has traditionally been the school system's source of revenue, he said. It was because of increases in the school tax on personal and real property that the city went into the earnings tax field, he asserted.

Comment by Hogan.

State Senator Edward J. Hogan of St. Louis, who has been chairman of the Senate Ways and Means committee which considered city earnings tax proposals in the past, agreed that the school board's plan would jeopardize the city's bill.

Since the city will ask the voters to increase the earnings tax to a full 1 per cent if the Legislature removes the ceiling, there is a good prospect of a $10,000,000 tax increase in St. Louis, Hogan said.

In view of that possible rise, he remarked, he was not prepared to say that he would favor the school board's earnings tax proposal.

"We have too many taxes now," he said. "The school board better know what it is doing."

Other St. Louis members of the Legislature agreed that the school board's proposal would be detrimental to the city's chances of passing its bill.

Similar View by Gunn.

Donald Gunn, president of the Board of Aldermen, expressed a view similar to Poelker's, saying he thought the results of the school board's proposal might be the failure of both the city's bill and the school system's proposed bill.

The school board's legislative committee, headed by Alex A. Aboussie, has been considering an earnings tax as a means of making up the expected loss of $1,500,000 in school revenue which the Board of Education faces.

The deficit results from reduction in the assessed valuation of merchants and manufacturers' inventories. The school system had calculated its income on an evaluation of 70 per cent of actual value. The evaluation was reduced by the city's Board of Merchants and Manufacturers' Tax Equalization from 70 per cent to 40 per cent in an effort to encourage more accurate reporting of taxes due.

No Decision on Size.

Aboussie said the board's legislative committee has not determined yet what size earnings tax it would recommend for approval by the full board.

The tax, whatever the amount, would be levied only against residents of the city working in the city, and not against non-residents who work in the city, Aboussie said.

He said the committee at first considered recommending that the Legislature authorize the board to take one-half of the city's earnings tax revenue, if the tax is increased by voter approval to a full 1 per cent.

However, Aboussie said, a question arose as to the legality of the school system's sharing in a city earnings tax, and it was decided the Board of Education would have to seek its own tax.

The earnings tax proposal has strong support among the full 12-member school board.

Aboussie and other members of the legislative committee said they hoped their proposal would not be detrimental to the city's bill.

"However," Aboussie remarked, "my first concern is for the school system and getting enough financing to keep our schools open. We lost the equivalent of nine cents of our tax rate by the reduction in evaluation, and we have got to get it back somehow."

One of the committee mem-

CUBA'S PRESIDENT TO BE A COLONEL, KENTUCKY TYPE

HAVANA, Jan. 7 (AP)—Reporter Alan Levy got bored with the press conference and asked Cuba's new president, Dr. Manuel Urrutia, if he'd like to be a Kentucky colonel.

Levy, a reporter for the Louisville Courier-Journal, said Urrutia's reply was positive:

"Yes. "Yes, yes. But will it take long."

The newspaper passed the word on to Kentucky Gov. A. B. Chandler. Chandler said he was perfectly willing to let Levy make Urrutia a Kentucky colonel in Chandler's name "and we'll take care of the details later."

KHRUSHCHEV, STEVENSON IN 'IDEAL' CABINET

LONDON, Jan. 7 (UPI)—The Daily Express awarded a prize today to a reader who conjured up a "world defense cabinet" with Nikita Khrushchev as prime minister and Adlai Stevenson as foreign secretary.

Stevenson was the only American on the list, which included one other Russian — "trade minister" Anastas Mikoyan—and a Canadian, "education minister" John G. Diefenbaker.

The Express had asked readers to suggest an ideal cabinet to meet "a threat to the earth from outer space."

Other names on the winner's entry were:

Chancellor of the exchequer, Ludwig Erhard of West Germany; defense minister, French Premier De Gaulle; transport minister, West German Chancellor Adenauer; labor minister, Britain's Aneurin Bevan; power minister, Britain's Sir John Cockcroft; agriculture minister, British Prime Minister Macmillan, and health minister, Australian Prime Minister Menzies.

FIVE POLICEMEN QUESTIONED ON GAMING PLACE

They Are Asked to Explain Why They Were at or Near Establishment.

Five St. Louis police officers were questioned today by Police Inspector James F. Thompson and asked to explain why they were seen at or near a suspected gambling establishment at 6234 Delmar boulevard.

None of the officers was suspended. Thompson said he would investigate their written reports and then would make recommendations to the Chief of Police on the basis of his findings.

Lts. William Greenspan and F. Lyman Davis were suspended yesterday because they failed to give "satisfactory explanations" for their presence at the Delmar establishment, site of several gambling raids.

The policemen questioned were:

Patrolmen Francis Donahue and Charles Casper, both of the Page boulevard district.

Sgt. Claude Pelham, who recently was transferred from the inspector's office to Central District.

Cpl. Claude Roth and Patrolman Frank E. Miller both of the traffic division.

Also scheduled to be questioned today were Detectives Bernard Mack and Robert Richters of the gambling squad.

Official Business.

Lt. John Bloecher, head of the gambling squad, has said that Mack and Richters went to 6234 Delmar on official business to see if gambling was in progress.

The police officers were reported seen at the establishment, known as the Delmar Confectionery, during a two-week surveillance conducted last month and early this month by a special squad operating under Inspector Thompson.

Patrolman Casper said in his report he was in the shop Dec. 30 at 1:35 p.m. and remained only about one minute. He said he went in, looked around, and walked right back outside.

During the surveillance, Casper was photographed entering the establishment without a cigar in visible evidence and emerging with a cigar in his mouth. He told Thompson he could not recall whether he al-

GOVERNOR ASKS FOR REMOVAL OF CEILING ON CITY EARNINGS TAX

Increases Proposed in Gasoline, Cigarette, Liquor and 'Use' Levies to Meet $1,157,000,000 Budget.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 7 —Gov. James T. Blair today called on the new Missouri Legislature to increase state taxes $46,500,000 a year to finance a record $1,157,000,000 budget for the two years starting July 1, and a 20-year state highway program.

The Governor was to deliver both his general legislative message and his budget address this afternoon, after the new legislature convened.

The 6000-word legislative message outlined a 51-point program to strengthen state and local government, improve law enforcement and traffic safety, liberalize state welfare programs and increase the state gasoline tax.

Proposed Increases.

State gasoline tax, from 3 to 5 cents a gallon, $30,000,000.

An extension of the present 2 per cent "use" tax on automobiles to all other goods, supplies and materials bought outside Missouri for use in this state, $8,000,000.

State cigarette tax, from 2 to 3 cents a package, $5,000,000.

State beer and liquor taxes by an average of more than 50 per cent, $3,500,000. Beer taxes would rise from 62 cents to $1 a barrel, and liquor taxes would be raised from 80 cents to $1.20 a gallon.

In addition to the gasoline tax rise, the Governor's legislative program included an indorsement of two proposals sponsored by the St. Louis City Administration. He urged the Legislature to remove the state-imposed ceiling on the city's earnings tax, thereby permitting St. Louisans to vote on an increase in the levy.

He also asked that authority be given the city to use parking meter receipts to help retire bonds issued for development of off-street parking facilities.

Other major legislative recommendations submitted by Blair in the message include:

Creation of a state public safety and fire prevention agency, and an up-grading of fire safety standards in schools.

Grant of full search and seizure powers to the State Highway Patrol.

Shift of state primary elections from August to May or June.

Adoption of indeterminate sentences in criminal cases.

Raise minimum driver's license age from 16 to 18 years.

Adoption of point system for suspension or revocation of driver's licenses.

Increased old-age pensions and other welfare grants.

Inauguration of hospitalization for welfare recipients.

Stronger state supervision of insurance companies.

State regulation of retail installment credit.

Increase in legislators' pay from $1500 to $5000 a year.

In his budget message, the Governor said he would recommend modification of property tax laws to permit taxing flight equipment of airlines and the movable equipment of barge lines.

Because the state levy is only 7 cents on each $100 assessed valuation, the return to the state would not be large from these sources but local governments could be helped considerably, he said.

All proceeds of the gasoline tax are earmarked for the highway program. The increase would be needed to finance the proposed $4,600,000,000 program of highway rebuilding and expansion to which the Federal Government would make a large contribution.

The revenue from the cigarette tax is earmarked for the public schools but the proposed increase would release an equal amount of general revenue money now being used to supplement the school tax funds.

The Governor's tax program

Giant Marble 'Oscar' Planned As Tombstone for Mike Todd

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1959.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7—A two-ton copy in Vermont marble of filmdom's Oscar is planned as a tombstone for showman Mike Todd's grave.

David Goldbogen, Todd's brother, disclosed this plan today for a memorial to the movie producer who was killed last March in a plane crash. The monument would be nine feet tall, of reddish-brown marble, and would cost about $8000.

Goldbogen said he has already had sketches drawn for the memorial. "I want to get the consent of Mike Todd Jr. and my brother's widow (Actress Elizabeth Taylor) before I go ahead with this," he said.

The giant Oscar would commemorate the awards won by "Around the World in 80 Days," Todd's last production.

"The base is to be flanked with two small stones, with only my brother's birth date, date of his death and his real name, 'Abraham Goldbogen,' with 'Michael Todd,' his show business name, in parenthesis," Goldbogen said.

"There would be no epitaph. We want to keep it simple."

MIKOYAN FLIES TO CLEVELAND ON TOUR OF U.S., IS MET BY EATON

Washington, Meanwhile, Studies Hints He Dropped About Possibility of Reolving Cold War Issues.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7 (AP)—Anastas I. Mikoyan, Soviet deputy premier, arrived in Cleveland today to start a 13-day coast-to-coast tour. On leaving his plane he walked between two lines of police as several hundred picketing nationality groups were held back by ropes.

Mikoyan tipped his hat as he got off a Capital Airlines plane. He hurried inside the concourse gates to hold a brief news conference before leaving the airport.

Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland industrialist, and his wife greeted the Soviet leader as he alighted, Mrs. Eaton speaking Russian.

Mikoyan told her it was very good to speak Russian with her, and solicitously advised the 75-year-old Eaton, who will be his host here, that he should wear a hat on his white-haired head, lest he catch cold. Mrs. Eaton gave Mikoyan a bouquet of carnations.

Eaton addressed the press conference first, declaring that an increasing interchange of visits "can lead to greater friendships between our two nations, the two most powerful that ever existed."

On behalf of Premier Khrushchev, Mikoyan extended personal greetings to Eaton, whose statements, Mikoyan said "bear testimony that people representing different systems of government can live together peaceably."

On the 12-mile ride from the airport to a downtown hotel, pickets hurled snowballs and spat against the sides of the limousines carrying the Mikoyan party. The police-escorted caravan took a roundabout way through suburban Lakewood to bypass protesting groups gathered along the way.

Before the plane landed, several hundred Iron Curtain country nationality groups had gathered at the airport. They carried such signs as "Blackmailer," "Mikoyan, your hands and red with Russian blood."

Police and security agents roped off the concourse and the pickets were not permitted inside nor on the observatory platform.

During the flight here Mikoyan sat beside Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov, who read him the news from New York and Washington newspapers. He inspected the cockpit of the Vickers Viscount plane and talked with the pilot and co-pilot.

Brother a Plane Designer.

He told them one of his brothers was an airplane engineer. That was Artem Mikoyan, co-designer of the MIG series of fighters. He said also he had one pilot-son killed in the war and another son who is still a pilot.

After an overnight stay here as the guest of millionaire Eaton, Mikoyan will go on to Detroit and on to the West Coast before returning to Washington Jan. 19 for talks with President Eisenhower.

A Soviet source in Berlin said Mikoyan would propose a compromise solution of the Berlin dispute when he sees Mr. Eisenhower. The source gave no details.

In the meantime, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and other top American officials collected for close scrutiny all the demands, promises, assurance and hints the old Bolshevik scattered about the nation's capital.

Vacationing Claim Doubted.

It was their impression that Mikoyan was here, not on vacation, as he insists, but to plug the line: Make me an offer.

Although he left a lot of things fuzzy, they said, he so far has come up with no genuine Soviet concession on the Berlin situation. Rather, any change appeared to be one of tone instead of substance, leaving the door open to possible concessions only after some sort of United States counter-proposal.

After conferring for more than two hours with Vice President Nixon at the Capitol yesterday, Mikoyan was asked by reporters whether Russia had altered its Berlin policy in any way.

"Why change it?" he fired back. "One does not change a good position."

Traveling with Mikoyan, besides Menshikov, were his son Sergo and five aids who arrived with him Sunday in Washington.

The Mikoyan entourage goes to Detroit tomorrow, Chicago on Friday, San Francisco on Saturday, and Los Angeles on Sunday and Monday. It returns east next Tuesday, going first to New York and possibly thereafter to Boston and Philadelphia.

Mikoyan, who asked for the appointment with Nixon, expressed surprise at the Vice President's youthful appearance. Nixon replied jokingly, "But I'm old inside."

Guest of Union Leader.

Mikoyan was a luncheon guest of James B. Carey, president of the AFL-CIO Electrical Workers Union. Carey said it was his idea and not an official AFL-CIO function. He said Mikoyan had been meeting industrialists and he wanted the Kremlin chieftain to confer with some union leaders. Some members of the AFL-CIO executive board refused to attend.

to-14 margin with all 34 Republican Senators participating.

Kuchel, who won over Senator Karl Mundt of South Dakota, was the candidate of a group of Senators who opposed election of Dirksen as leader.

The Dirksen victory was a defeat for the group led by Senator George Aiken of Vermont. Emerging from the two-hour closed-door session, Aiken smiled and said the results "were the democratic processes at work."

Hails Kuchel's Victory.

Senator Jacob K. Javits of New York, one of the leaders of the insurgent group, told reporters "a really important victory has been won" in Kuchel's election, and in assurances that the group's views would receive more consideration.

Shortly after the election, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said "the President congratulates both Senator Dirksen and Senator Kuchel."

Conservative forces were quarterbacked by Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire.

Kuchel was the candidate of the insurgent group and his election should give them additional prestige in congressional actions.

Re-elected without opposition were Bridges as chairman of the Senate G.O.P. policy committee, Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts as chairman of the Conference of All Republicans and Senator Milton Young of North Dakota as secretary of the conference.

Soon after the Senate and House convened at noon, some members of Congress were quick to introduce pet bills.

Representative Lee Metcalf (Dem.), Montana, proposed a multi-billion dollar program of federal aid to the states for public school construction and teachers' salaries. He said Senator James E. Murray (Dem.), Montana, would sponsor a similar bill in the Senate. Grants would total an estimated $1,100,000,000 the first year, almost five billion dollars by the fourth year.

Representative Francis E. Walter (Dem.), Pennsylvania, introduced a bill for federal aid to economically depressed areas. A bill of this kind was vetoed by President Eisenhower last session.

Before the Republican Senate conference balloting, Aiken had served notice that "if we are beaten this will not be the last of it." He said the group would meet regularly and seek a united front approach that would carry weight on many matters.

In another development, "conservative" spokesmen announced they would seek later this week to name Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel of Kansas as chairman of the Republican Committee on Committees which assigns G.O.P. senators to committee posts, and Goldwater to succeed Schoeppel as chairman of their Senatorial Compaign Committee.

With the addition of two Senators and a House member from Alaska, the Eighty-sixth became the largest Congress in history.

Democrats hold overwhelming control of both houses, 283 to 153 in the House and 64 to 34 in the Senate.

For the first time, it was the Congress of the 49 states. Alaska got a big round of applause in the House when its name was called on the roll of states.

On the roll call, 432 of the 436 House members responded.

Truman Is in Gallery.

Vice President Nixon called the Senate into session. One of the gallery spectators was former President Harry S. Truman. From time to time, he waved to Senators on the floor. As a former Senator, Truman was entitled to the privileges of the floor, but did not avail himself of them immediately.

When newly elected Senators were sworn in, Senator Stephen M. Young (Dem.), O., was escorted to the rostrum for the oath by Democratic leader Johnson. Ordinarily, this is a courtesy that would have been performed by Young's Democratic colleague, Senator Frank Lausche. But Young had said he didn't want Lausche's escort—that Lausche had done nothing to help him get elected.

Not until later will the new Congress get down to actual work on legislation.

The President will deliver his State of the Union message in person Friday, and will send a 77-billion-dollar balanced budget to Congress Jan. 19.

Meantime, the Congress will go ahead with the routine of appointing and organizing committees and otherwise preparing to handle a flood of proposed legislation.

Democratic leaders have expressed a determination to write an independent legislative record on which their candidates can stand in 1960.

As Rayburn put it yesterday: "We have to bring out a great program of legislation as we did in the Eighty-fourth and Eighty-fifth Congresses — that got us elected to the Eighty-sixth."

Then Raybnrn joined in a theme Johnson has been preaching: "The Democratic party is a party of responsibility and not just of opposition."

However, there seemed little doubt opposition would be forthcoming quickly after Mr. Eisenhower outlined his program.

Faced with swiftly mounting problems of space exploration, Russian missile advances and this rising cost of defense, Democrats have made it clear they will eye his budget with deep skepticism.

NASSER QUIETLY PURGES REDS IN SYRIA AND EGYPT

More Than 300 Arrested Since Jan. 1 Still Being Held in Damascus Prisons.

BEIRUT, Jan. 7 (AP)—President Nasser has now virtually stamped out Communism in the Syrian region of the United Arab Republic.

He has carried out one of the biggest anti-Communist purges ever seen in the Middle East. More than 300 Communists arrested since the Jan. 1 purge began are still being held in prisons. No hint has been given yet what will happen to them.

Other Reds are in hiding or have fled the country—or are small fry beyond notice. The arrests tapered off today to a few stragglers.

Top Syrian Communist Khaled Bakhdash was reported by the Beirut newspaper As Sahafa to have arrived in Baghdad, Iraq. This report could not be confirmed. Bakhdash reportedly fled Syria at the outset of the purge.

As Sahafa, a strong and articulate Nasser supporter, said other Arab Communist leaders now are gathering in Baghdad for an important conference.

In Damascus, Syria officials still refuse to make any announcements about the Communist purge. Six days after it began, resident newspaper men still were prevented by censorship from dispatching any news about it.

No reasons have been given why Nasser chose to carry out the liquidation of the Communists so quietly. Perhaps it was to avoid openly offending the Soviet Union. Whatever the reason, Nasser struck down the Communists in both Syria and Egypt at a moment when they were beginning a bold bid to challenge him.

Nasser's anti-Communist purge has served another purpose. It has quieted growing grumblings among the big Syrian landowners and business men. The big landowners were balking at the new land reform program aimed at splitting up large landholdings among the peasants.

The business men have been complaining against the new financial restrictions imposed on them since the creation of the U.A.R. and which have hurt their businesses. Nasser has now sent three lieutenants to Syria to straighten out these matters.

REBELS EXECUTE 10 OFFICERS IN BATISTA FORCES

Purge of Cubans Accused of Crimes Against People Apparently Started.

HAVANA, Jan. 7 (AP)—Ten officers of ex-dictator Fulgencio Batista's armed forces have been executed in eastern Cuba, the revolutionary regime announced today.

The executions, apparently the start of a widespread purge of Cubans accused of crimes against the people, were carried out at Santiago, birthplace of Fidel Castro's rebel movement.

Among those shot was Col. Arcadio Casillas Lumpuy, chief of Batista's operations in Oriente province, of which Santiago is the capital.

Meanwhile, Castro indicated the island's provisional government will steer clear of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union and other Communist nations.

The newspaper Diario de la Marina quoted Castro as saying in an interview it was his personal opinion Cuba should not maintain relations with any dictatorship. Communist propaganda has praised Castro and attacked the Batista regime.

Diario de la Mariana also quoted Castro as saying a rebel law confiscating all British goods in Cuba still is on the books but is subject to ratification by the provisional government. Castro ordered the confiscation when Britain was selling arms to the Batista government.

New Constitution.

The provisional cabinet worked far into the night last night preparing a new constitution for the interim period until elections are held in 18 to 24 months. The basic law will replace the 1940 constitution of Batista.

Provisional President Manuel Urrutia yesterday dismissed provincial governors, mayors and councilmen in the island's six provinces. New appointees were not announced immediately.

The new cabinet was reported preparing a decree abolishing all political parties and taking away the political rights of all candidates in the 1954 and 1958 elections held by Batista. This would bar even the opposition candidates tolerated by Batista from the elections which Urrutia has promised to hold.

Bank Account Freeze.

Informed sources said other cabinet decrees would freeze the private bank accounts of all Batista officials and stop payment on all checks outstanding against the Treasury. It was problematical, however, how much this could recover for the government since the custom for Cubans profiting most from the government has been to bank in the United States or Europe.

Yesterday Urrutia's cabinet dissolved congress, suspended the criminal courts and announced it would rule by decree until elections are held. Revolutionary courts reportedly will be set up to try Batista, now an exile in the Dominican Republic, and other officials of his regime who may be charged.

Urrutia has said he would demand Batista's extradition from the Dominican Republic asked indirectly for asylum.

"There seems to be no question about any physical danger to Batista in the Dominican Republic. Therefore the question of asylum would not arise," Rogers said.

"If the former President should apply for United States entry on some other basis, he would have to be treated like any other applicant. We have had no such application."

E. T. Smith, United States ambassador to Cuba, arrived in Washington yesterday for consultations at the State Department.

The ambassador said he believed the United States should offer assistance to Cuba "to revitalize her economy."

Smith started back to Havana today.

Meanwhile, the Immigration Service reported 312 Cuban refugees have arrived in the United States since Batista's downfall. Officials said 229 have been granted admission as temporary visitors and 83 others were given parole pending further examination.

Krupp Industries Permitted To Buy German Steel Company

Empire Getting Bigger Instead of Smaller, as Allied Control Council Has Directed.

© New York Times News Service

BONN, Jan. 7—Another deconcentration order against the German industrial empires that created the Nazi war machine has apparently been jettisoned.

An announcement yesterday from the Krupp industries headquarters at Essen said that the high authority of the European Coal and Steel Community had approved Krupp's application to buy the Bochumer Verein, world-renowned makers of specialized steel products.

The Allied Control Council's order to break up the Krupp's family-owned empire is still technically valid. One of the Allies' painfully achieved deconcentration orders against big German industry, it was designed to prevent the Krupp holdings from ever being reconstituted as an integrated operation encompassing everything from coal and iron mines to machine-tool plants and factories producing pins and needles.

March Deadline.

The deconcentration order gave Alfried Krupp, the 51-year-old head of the family, five years to dispose of large sections of his holdings. The deadline was March 1959. It has been clear for some time that the chances of Krupp's disposing of the holdings are dim.

Yesterday's announcement that he had approval for the purchase of a big outside steel concern strengthened the belief that he would not let go of anything he already has.

In receiving sovereignty from the Western Allies in 1954, the West German government pledged to continue the Allies' deconcentration policies. It also reserved the right to ask for reconsideration of the question. In February 1957 the federal government did so in connection with the Krupp case.

U.S., French Approval.

The United States and France were reported to have given the West German government to understand, over British objections, that they had nothing against Krupp's maintaining his properties—a vast number of mines, foundries and plants of immense value throughout the Ruhr.

Krupp, who was released from prison in 1951 after having served three years of a twelve-year sentence as a war criminal, indicated last year that he had no intention of carrying out the order unless he was forced to do so by the West German courts.

He said the deconcentration orders were contrary to the basic rights of the republic and in any event he had been unable to find any buyers for the properties listed to be sold.

A spokesman for the Krupp organization said yesterday that negotiations were under way between the western powers and the federal government for formal lifting of the enforced sales order. He thought the negotiations would be facilitated by the high authority's approval of the merger of Bochumer Verein with Krupp's Rheinhausen A.G., the major Krupp steel producer.

PARTY HEADS SAY BULGANIN DIDN'T CONFESS ENOUGH

Think Ex-Premier Will Have to Do Better to Make Up for His Part in Plot.

© New York Times News Service

MOSCOW, Jan. 7 — High-ranking Soviet Communists have accused former Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin of lying to them in his abject confession three weeks ago.

They think Bulganin will have to do much better to make up for his participation in a plot against the party leadership.

The Soviet leaders indicated that Bulganin's speech at the December meeting of the party's central committee was actually his second effort at apology. They said it was just as "feeble" and "unconvincing" as his earlier attempt.

These comments were contained in the speeches of eight party officials who addressed the central committee plenum held here from Dec. 15 through 19. A thick book described as a stenographic record of the meeting has been published here. The stenographic records sold out within a few hours.

The demands for a better statement from Bulganin indicate that the party intends to pursue further the activities of the so-called anti-party group. It is thought the subject may be raised again at the twenty-first party congress scheduled to open Jan. 27.

The anti-party group as first identified in July 1957 consisted of former Premier Malenkov, former party troubleshooter Kaganovich and former Foreign Minister Molotov. Former Foreign Minister Shepilov was said to have "sided with them." They were accused of opposing nearly everything the party under Khrushchev had tried to do in recent years and specifically of plotting against the leadership.

In November in announcing the seven-year economic plan, Khrushchev casually included Bulganin in a listing of the plotters.

Three weeks ago Bulganin rose at the plenum and said that all the charges against him and against the other plotters were true. But he went on to minimize his own role in the conspiracy.

NEW BRIDGE SITE OUTLINED, INVOLVES ACRE OF MEMORIAL

Earlier Plan Takes in 25 Acres of Riverfront Project — Stadium Move Draws Some Criticism.

A change in location of a proposed Mississippi river bridge to eliminate most of the infringement on the site of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial was outlined here yesterday.

In outlining the revised location, Eero Saarinen, memorial architect, suggested the bridge and its approaches be shifted slightly southward to coincide with Poplar street. This location would take only about one acre from the memorial site, instead of 25 acres as contemplated in original plans for the bridge, he said.

Saarinen addressed an afternoon meeting sponsored by the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Association at the Old Courthouse. Earlier, he attended a meeting of city, state and federal officials at which a three-member committee was appointed to determine a definite location for the proposed bridge.

"Takes Too Much Land."

Saarinen called the bridge, which has been proposed by the Missouri Highway Department, "a very good thing if it is co-ordinated with the park," but added, "the present preliminary plan takes too much land out of the memorial site."

He displayed a sketch that he said was based on a tentative plan by the highway department. It showed the bridge approach entering the memorial site at its southwest corner at Poplar and the Third Street Interregional Highway, and angling northeastward to a point on the Mississippi riverfront nearly a block north of Poplar. In addition, three ramps of a traffic interchange cut through the park project.

Saarinen's plan would put the bridge approach, leading from the Daniel Boone Expressway, outside the park site along Poplar. In addition, only one access ramp would cut through the extreme southwest corner of the park.

"Probably the final location will be somewhere between these two," Saarinen said. He expressed confidence that a location for the bridge could be found that would not seriously affect the memorial project.

Fear of Delay.

Concern had been expressed over the amount of land the original plan for the bridge would take from the park site. There also was concern that the need to obtain Congressional approval for any encroachment on the site might slow further the often-delayed memorial project.

A spokesman for the State Highway Department said he felt the amount of park land required for the bridge project could be reduced materially from the original estimate of 25 acres. However, some memorial land would be required, he indicated.

The committee that will seek to determine a location for the bridge consists of Saarinen; John Poland, planning director of the City Plan Commission, and Myer Ableman, urban area engineer for the State Highway Department.

Saarinen said a tentative time schedule that has been established by the National Park Service calls for completion of the entire riverfront project, including its central feature a towering stainless steel arch, by 1963.

A sports stadium that has been proposed for an area southwest of the memorial site might "further disbalance" the downtown sky line, which will be a backdrop for the riverfront project, the architect said.

In answer to a question, he said any attempt to have a street extending completely through the project site from east to west would be "an impossible problem." No streets are contemplated through the park, he added.

Saarinen stressed the importance of assuring suitable development in areas close to the memorial site to avoid destroying its esthetic value. He urged that St. Louis adopt regulatory ordinances to control the development.

Monkey Business at Standstill When Cold Keeps Visitors Away

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Cookie, retired chimpanzee actor and St. Louis Zoo favorite, waiting for break in frigid weather which would bring more visitors to zoo.

Many animals at the St. Louis Zoo, especially the "ham actors" among the primates, appear glum and depressed when zero temperatures cut attendance to a handful of visitors, Zoo Director George P. Vierheller said today.

"A lot of the animals, particularly the apes, get lonesome," he added. "They miss people. After all, what's the use of a gorilla beating his chest if there's nobody there to see him? What's the use of being a gibbon and yodeling if there's no audience?"

The Zoo's great extrovert, Cookie, retired actor from the Chimpanzee show, in summer delights in rushing from the rear of his cage to spurt water on unsuspecting visitors.

Yesterday, with cold weather still keeping his audiences away, Cookie was an unhappy ape. He sat hunched in a corner of his cage, doing nothing more than occasionally cocking an eye toward the ceiling.

No Chest Beating.

St. Louisans accustomed to the somersaults and chest beating of Om Bom, the young gorilla, would not have recognized him. He was quiet, only occasionally moving to the front of his cage to look back and forth, as if expecting visitors.

Two other melancholy figures were Pete and George, the unusually affectionate chimpanzees, who are great crowd pleasers and are known for the appealing manner in which they hold out their arms to visitors.

Elephants like, but don't necessarily miss people. Vierheller explained that they form friendly cliques, enjoy each other's company, and manage to pass the inside winter boredom in contentment.

But that isn't the case with Jack, the Toucan and the "character" of the Bird House. He senses that the spillage of popcorn is in direct relation to the size of the crowd.

He sat on a rail with nothing but a stony, if not a disgusted, stare at the lone visitor who appeared empty-handed — no crackerjack box in which Jack could suddenly poke his beak.

Half-Hearted Yodels.

Carmencita, a gibbon who can yodel in two tones, and her friend Blondie, also of fine voice, broke out in a back-and-forth duet after three visitors had been around for a few minutes, but the effort obviously was half-hearted and the house soon fell silent.

"They do better when there's a crowd," Vierheller said gravely.

Meanwhile, Poncho II is in training for the chimpanzee show. Zoo visitors will remember him as the young chimpanzee who eluded his mother and climbed on the bars outside the cage as she tried frantically to retrieve him.

Mike Kostial, chimpanzee trainer, is working with the monkey and reports great progress. Vierheller described Poncho II, one year and three months old, as a highly intelligent chimpanzee.

"He will have a minor part in the show next year," Vierheller said, "but we foresee stardom eventually."

OLD JEFFERSON COUNTY CASES TO BE REVIEWED

New Prosecutor Will Re-Examine Some of 433 Charges That O'Brien Dropped.

William B. Milfelt, new prosecuting attorney of Jefferson county, said today he will re-examine some of the 433 cases dismissed recently by his predecessor with the view of reinstating cases "where it appears an injustice has been done."

The wholesale dismissals of both misdemeanor and felony charges was done last month by W. H. Stewart O'Brien, who was defeated for re-election by Milfelt last fall.

O'Brien told the Post-Dispatch today he "cleaned out the docket" in the court of Magistrate H. Glenn Weber at Magistrate Weber's request. O'Brien, elected to the first of his two terms in 1954, said some cases went back to 1952. Milfelt took office last Thursday.

Among the cases dismissed were 18 traffic charges against drivers for C.E.S. Truck Lines. The company is headed by Amos A. Govero, Jefferson county Democratic leader and lobbyist for Missouri truck operators.

The Post-Dispatch, in a series of articles last September, reported that a large number of traffic cases against C.E.S. drivers were permitted to languish on the docket in Magistrate Weber's court at Hillsboro. It also was shown that O'Brien and his assistant, James H. Connor Jr., had represented C.E.S. Truck Lines in civil suits.

Some Cases Too Old.

Milfelt explained that felony cases more than three years old and misdemeanors more than one year old can not be reinstated under the statutes.

"I intend to examine all cases dismissed by my predecessor coming under the statutes," Milfelt told a reporter. "Where it appears that injustice has been done by dismissing the charges, and that a conviction can be obtained, the charges will be refiled."

Milfelt said he was furnished a list by the Highway Patrol of 335 dropped cases that had been filed since 1954. The remaining cases dismissed by O'Brien were described as "scattered" by Milfelt.

Among the cases to be reexamined by Milfelt is a charge of rape, brought by an 18-year-old woman, which O'Brien dismissed. Milfelt said federal agents were interested in aspects of the case. O'Brien told the Post-Dispatch the woman filed a complaint, but that, in his discretion as prosecutor, he did not issue any information. The reason, he indicated, was doubt that he could obtain a conviction on the evidence.

Milfelt said that prior to his taking office, the woman sent word to him that she was offered a $100 bribe if she would not press the charge. He added that he is "keeping her report in mind" in his reexamination of the case.

A vagrancy charge against William (Dutch) Meese, Jefferson county gambling figure, was among the cases dismissed by O'Brien. The charge, which can not be reinstated because of statutory limitations, grew out of a gambling investigation.

O'Brien, who has opened a law office in Festus, described the cases dismissed as "junk." He said they included nonsupport complaints, which had not been pressed; traffic violations by out-of-state motorists who cannot be found and similar matters.

He added that "legitimate charges" remain on the docket. Milfelt confirmed that there are many cases pending on Magistrate Weber's docket.

Jefferson county was described by Gov. James T. Blair last fall as "one of three bad spots in the state." The Governor said his reference was to gambling and liquor violations, and he named the Joplin area and "a bad county in the Bootheel" as the other lawless spots.

SQUAD SET UP TO CHECK ON POLICE IS CUT

Seven of 12 Men in Unit Shifted to Other Duty — Issue Involving Rank Cited.

Activities of the St. Louis Police Department's field training squad, formed last October to insure that policemen were complying with new procedures to combat crime, have been reduced drastically, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

Seven of the 12 officers assigned to the squad under Police Inspector James F. Thompson were transfered to other duty by Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell.

The transfers were made after Thompson submitted a report to the Board of Police Commissioners which included a recommendation that members of the squad should have the rank of lieutenant, or above.

Thompson's Position.

Thompson did not, however, recommend that the squad be reduced. He has long advocated that field inspections should be made by higher ranking officers.

O'Connell confirmed the personnel transfers, but asserted that the squad has not been dissolved. The work of the squad will now be carried on by Thompson and his deputies, the chief said. At present, there are not enough lieutenants or captains available to assign to the unit, he explained.

"The Goon Squad."

Work of the squad, which included checking as to what individual policemen were doing on their beat assignments, has caused widespread dissatisfaction among department personnel, who dubbed the unit "the goon squad."

When the unit was organized, H. Sam Priest, president of the Police Board, said its purpose would not be to "catch" officers in mistakes, nor to criticize.

Priest said members of the squad would act as instructors to help policemen do a better job. The squad was not given the authority to institute disciplinary action.

Among officers transferred from the squad was Lt. Robert Matteson, who has been named head of the newly organized mobile reserve unit.

In Gainnig Inquiry.

Sgt. Claude Pelham was tranferred to Central district. He is one of the nine policemen who have been ordered to explain their appearances at a suspected gambling establishment at 6234 Delmar boulevard. Sgt. Preston Davis, to the mobile reserve unit; Sgt. Elmer Kuhlman, Page boulevard district, and three patrolmen who had been assigned to the squad as drivers. The transfers were effective last Thursday.

Regular inspection work will be carried on by Thompson and three officers, Capt. Edmund Doherty, the deputy inspector; Capt. William Pleitner, who was a member of the field squad, and Lt. Thomas Hale.

Report Urges Jefferson County Be Separate Judicial Circuit

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 7—A recommendation that Jefferson county be made a separate judicial circuit is contained in a report to be presented to the Missouri Legislature by a joint Senate-House committee, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

The present circuit, presided over by Judge Edward T. Eversole of Festus, comprises Jefferson, Washington, Iron, Reynolds and Wayne counties, with a work load of more than 500 cases a year. Jefferson county, which is developing industrially, provides enough cases to keep one judge fully occupoed, the report points out.

The committee, known as the Joint Committee on Judicial Restricting, proposes that Washington, Reynolds and Iron counties join Dent and Crawford counties in a separate circuit. The recommendation is one of many changes proposed throughout the state.

The committee began its work in September 1957 with the assistance of the Missouri Supreme Court. Through interviews with circuit judges throughout the state, it was determined that the annual work load varies from 200 to more than 900 cases. In some circuits, such as Buchanan county, the report recommends that the number of judges be reduced from three to two. It was also learned that some judges literally "work night and day" while others complete their work in short order.

For St. Louis and St. Louis county, the Eighth and Thirteenth circuits, the report withheld any immediate recommendations. It suggested that a revaluation of the two circuits be made in two years to determine the work load.

A salary increase for circuit judges is included in the report. The present salary is $14,000 a year. The suggested increase was $2500.

FHA OK'S START ON LAST THREE PLAZA BUILDINGS

Papers Signed Providing Insurance for Loans on Redevelopment Apartments.

Papers providing Federal Housing Administration insurance for loans on the last three of the six apartment buildings in the Plaza redevelopment project were signed today.

Alan T. Smith, head of the St. Louis office of the FHA, said this step now opens the way for the Urban Redevelopment Corp. to start construction on the three buildings with short-term loans from a group of banks. Ultimately, the insured mortgages are to be purchased by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

One mortgage approved today is in the amount of $4,436,100 and covers two buildings containing 312 dwelling units. They will be located in the block bounded by Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Olive and Pine streets.

The other mortgage, for $1,866,800, covers a single building of 156 units to be located on the east side of Seventeenth street between Olive and Pine streets. Both mortgages bear 4¼ per cent interest and will have 39-year maturities.

Work is now under way on construction of the first three buildings. When all are completed, the Urban Redevelopment Corp. will have available 1090 units for middle income tenants in the Plaza area. The corporation was organized to combat decay in the heart of the city.

Smith said final closing papers on the projects would be signed on completion of the buildings and inspection of them by the FHA.

IRMA H. FRIEDE WOULD SERVE AS UNPAID TEACHER

Mrs. Irma H. Friede, only woman member of the Board of Education, offered yesterday to do her bit toward keeping school spending down.

During a discussion of the need for more teachers in the face of dwindling tax revenues, Mrs. Friede announced to other board members that she had offered to serve as a substitute teacher—without pay.

"I can do as good a job teaching elementary school as any substitute teacher now on the payroll," Mrs. Friede declared. She was a teacher in the public school system 30 years ago.

Though enrollment has increased almost 4000 more than anticipated and income from taxes is expected to be as much as $1,500,000 less than anticipated, the instruction department so far has not availed itself of her offer. "We're getting by," Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey said.

BERNARD FENSTERWALD JR. QUITS AS HENNINGS CHIEF AID

Special to the Post Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 — Bernard Fensterwald Jr. of Washington has resigned as administrative assistant to Senator Thomas G. Hennings (Dem.), Missouri, it was learned today.

Fensterwald, who has been Henning's chief assistant since May 1957, confirmed reports that he had submitted his resignation last Friday. He said he would remain on the job until a successor is appointed.

Asked about reports that he and Hennings had disagreed over a passport bill Hennings introduced last year, Fensterwald said there was no disagreement "that I know of." He told the Post-Dispatch that "personal and family reasons of my own" prompted his resignation. He declined to discuss these reasons but said his relations with Hennings had been "amicable throughout."

THEFTS AT NEW LIBRARY EVEN BEFORE IT IS OPENED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7 (AP)—The new North Beach Public Library will not be opened until Feb. 5, but already three outdoor lights and some of its shrubbery have been stolen.

"Did you ever put up that sign that defacing public property is illegal?" Library Commissioner J. Max Moore asked at a meeting yesterday.

"They'd steal the sign," said Commissioner S. Lee Vevuris.

25 FLEE FROM STREETCAR WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT

Twenty-five passengers scrambled from a streetcar on North Grand boulevard today when the trolley line snapped and flames broke out on the roof.

Two passengers, Mrs. Cora Holcomb, 55 years old, of 5650 Roosevelt place, and Miss Olive Walker, 60, of 315 Church street, Ferguson, were slightly hurt in the rush. Both refused medical attention.

The Public Service Co. said the cause of the trolley line breaking was not known. Damage to the streetcar was estimated at $50. Streetcar service on North Grand was disrupted for about an hour while the line was repaired.

INVESTMENT FOUNDATION GIFTS GO TO COLLEGES HERE

Six St. Louis area colleges and universities were among more than 380 educational institutions which received gifts totaling $31,700 from the American Investment Foundation as part of its annual program of support for education, it was announced today.

The local institutions are Washington and St. Louis universities, Fontbonne, Maryville, Lindenwood and Webster colleges. Ten other colleges in other parts of the state which are members of the Missouri College Joint Fund Committee also shared in the gift.

One phase of the foundation's annual program provides for economic research and education, Donald L. Barnes, president of American Investment Co., said. Authorized was a $2500 grant for a fellowship at Washington University for graduate research. 6 NEW ILLINOIS INSTITUTIONS PROPOSED FOR RETARDED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 7—Construction by the State of Illinois of six small residential institutions for mentally retarded persons, including units at East St. Louis and Carbondale, was recommended yesterday in the report of a special state commission to Gov. William G. Stratton.

The Commission on Mental Retardation, named by the governor, urged improvement in existing state schools at Dixon and Lincoln. In addition to the proposed units at East St. Louis and Carbondale, the commission said institutions should be built in the Chicago, Champaign, Albion and Galesburg areas.

Residential units would be for patients of various ages. The commission said construction of the six new facilities would eliminate overcrowding at Dixon and Lincoln. It also recommended laws which would withhold recognition from public school districts not providing facilities for mentally retarded children.

Honorable Discharge.

First Polar-Orbiting Satellite Expected to Be Launched Soon

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7 (AP) —The first polar-orbit satellite is expected to be launched from the West Coast within the next few days.

It may carry some form of life, perhaps a mouse, to test the hazards man will encounter in space.

This launching from Vandenberg Air Force Base, 170 miles north of Los Angeles, will open a program of space research at the new Pacific missile range.

The 1300-pound satellite will be the first of 12 or more to be fired this year as part of Project Discoverer.

The two-stage ballistic missile will be aimed south across the Pacific. If the launching is successful, the satellite will orbit around the earth from pole to pole for a few hours, perhaps even a few days, then plunge back into the earth's atmosphere.

Discoverer satellites are equipped with heat-and-water-resistant capsules, to be ejected over water so their instruments can be recovered, along with any animal passengers.

The Pacific missile range is the only place in the free world with facilities for launching polar-orbit satellites without endangering populated areas. Project Discoverer is a first step toward Project Sentry, which calls for television cameras to scan all the earth rotating beneath the satellites orbiting from pole to pole. Sentry satellites are not expected to be sent aloft before 1960.

Two-stage Thors will be used for the first few satellite shots from Vandenberg. Later, more powerful Atlas missiles will rocket satellites weighing several tons into space and keep them aloft longer.

Now under development are even more powerful missiles, which may be the vehicles to carry man into space.

U.S. TO SHUFFLE ENVOYS IN ASIA, AFRICA, MIDEAST

© New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 — President Eisenhower will soon ask the Senate to approve a number of shifts of United States ambassadors in Africa, the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

Philip K. Crowe, former ambassador to Ceylon and now a special assistant to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, will go to South Africa to replace Henry A. Byroade.

Byroade in turn will be sent to Afghanistan where he will succeed Sheldon T. Mills.

Mills, a career officer, will be named to the ambassadorship in Jordan, a post that is now vacant.

It is also planned to replace Carl W. Strom in Cambodia. His successor will be William Cattell Trimble, who is now minister of embassy in Bonn, West Germany.

These shifts will follow another change in Middle East representation announced a few days ago—the appointment of John Durnford Jernegan as ambassador to Iraq to replace Waldemar J. Gallman. Jernegan has been minister counsellor in Rome.

QUOTA OF 50 ENLISTMENTS FOR NAVY RECRUITERS HERE

The Navy's St. Louis recruiting office has received a quota of 50 enlistments for January, it was announced today by Chief Engineman C. H. Bull, recruiter in charge. Most recruits will be sent to Great Lakes Naval Training Station, near Chicago, with others going to the station at San Diego, Calif.

The recruiting quota for the St. Louis Navy Recruiting District, comprising most of Missouri and all of southern Illinois, is 275 for January, Lt. Comdr. K. C. Gresowski, officer in charge, said.

A total of 2425 men enlisted in the district in 1958, compared with 1970 the year before, he added. Fifty-six women enlisted and 428 ex-service men re-enlisted, he reported.

PLAN SET TO HELP LAWYERS GET QUALIFIED SECRETARIES

A co-operative plan has been worked out by the Missouri State Employment Service and the St. Louis county chapter of the National Association of Legal Secretaries to help attorneys obtain qualified secretaries, the employment service and the association announced today.

"Competent legal secretaries are in very short supply," the announcement said. "Thus it is vitally important that both organizations assist local attorneys in recruiting qualified secretarial help. It is equally important that unemployed legal secretaries be given adequate information about job opportunities in this area."

Qualified legal secretaries who wish to obtain employment may register with the Missouri State Employment Service at any of its county offices, 10 North Meramec avenue, Clayton; 29 North Gore avenue, Webster Groves, 1609 Hodiamont avenue, Wellston.

JOSEPH JANKO IS FOUND GUILTY OF TAX EVASION

Joseph W. Janko, former employe of East Side gangster Frank (Buster) Wortman, was found guilty on three counts of income tax evasion yesterday in the court of United States District Judge Randolph H. Weber.

Janko's attorney, Norman London, asked for a mistrial on the grounds that some members of the 12-man jury had read newspaper accounts of the trial. London contended these stories were prejudicial to his client.

Judge Weber told London to put the motion in writing. He set Feb. 20 to hear arguments.

Judge Weber ordered Janko to remain on bond and to appear at the Feb. 20 hearing "for such further order as the court may make." He did not indicate whether he would pass sentence at that time in the event the mistrial motion is denied.

False Returns Alleged.

Janko, a former convict, was charged with falsifying his income tax returns in 1954, 1955 and 1956 to evade payment of $662. The Government said Janko reported his income correctly, but claimed deductions for two children for whom he was not paying 50 per cent of their support.

The jury deliberated about three hours. Immediately after the verdict, London asked that the jury be polled to determine whether members had read newspaper articles. They had been instructed not to read accounts of the trial or to listen to them over radio or television.

Questioned by Judge Weber, two jurors said they had read newspaper accounts and two others said persons had spoken to them about newspaper articles. All members of the jury said their verdict was not influenced by the newspapers but was reached on evidence presented in court.

Referred to Background.

The newspaper accounts contained information about Janko's background not brought out in the trial. They included references to Janko's association with Wortman.

Janko's income tax returns, in evidence in the trial, showed he was employed at Club Prevue and the St. Clair Club, in which Wortman had a principal interest. The returns also showed he received income from the Stephen Gorman Bricklaying Co., a firm that includes several Wortman associates on its payroll.

Janko, also known as Yanko, faces a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine on each count. Each year he evaded taxes stands as a separate count.

Janko did not testify. The only defense witness was his present wife, Mrs. Rosalie Janko, who said she saw her husband give one of his sons $20 on at least 10 occasions in one year.

The principal Government witness was Mrs. Anna Taylor, Janko's former wife and mother of the two children in question. Since they were divorced in 1953, Janko contributed a total of $175 and some clothing to the children she said.

Legislature

made no mention of a proposed $26,000,000 annual increase in state school aid to be financed from a proposed increase in the state sales tax. A special study committee made the proposal yesterday. Gov. Blair had told reporters he would be strongly opposed at this time to any rise in the 2 per cent sales tax.

Election of Officers.

Both houses of the Legislature convened promptly at noon. Senator Floyd R. Gibson (Dem.), Independence, was nominated as Speaker by his erstwhile rival, Senator William E. Hilsman (Dem.), St. Louis. He was elected, 32 to 0. He represents the conservative wing of the party in the Senate.

In the House, Representative Richard H. Ichord (Dem.) Houston, was elected speaker almost by acclamation after the Republican minority made a perfunctory move to nominate Representative Dwight Beals (Rep.) Kansas City. As the voting lights flashed on the board, the Beals nomination was withdrawn. Following a similar pattern, the House elected A. Basey Vanlandingham (Dem.), Columbia, speaker pro tem.

The old rules of the House were adopted with two changes. One change will require a two-thirds majority vote to obtain reconsideration of defeated measures and another will require the same majority to cut off debate. The last regular and special sessions of the House had many motions to reconsider defeated bills. Both rules previously had required only 79 votes, or a simple majority.

A number of bills to carry out some of the Governor's recommended legislation were introduced after his messages were concluded.

Cut in Fund Request.

In submitting a proposed record budget of $1,157,516,514 for the two years starting July 1, Gov. Blair pointed out it represented a cut of $65,000,000 in requests from departments and agencies.

It includes $419,200,000 in general revenue funds, $323,200,000 in other earmarked funds and $415,200,000 in federal grants for welfare, educational and highway projects.

The $16,500,000 increase in general revenue (excluding the highway tax revenue rise proposal) is required to balance the budget for the next two years, Blair said. The expenditures proposed in the budget are about $39,158,000 in excess of the anticipated revenues for the biennium.

To meet this deficit, taxes would be increased $33,000,000 on a biennial basis and the remainder would come from unexpended appropriations at the close of the current fiscal period, plus transfers of certain funds to general revenue. This would leave the budget balanced and with a surplus of about $91,200, Blair said.

In his budget message, Blair pointed out that the $40,000,000 surplus with which the current biennium began July 1, 1957, will have been cut to $20,000,000 at the start of the new fiscal period this summer. Sound fiscal policy demands that the state have a cushion or reserve of about $20,000,000, and the Governor cautioned that no further appropriations of this balance be made.

"It is not a pleasant duty to ask our citizens for more tax money, but we know there are continuing demands for improved services," he said. "These increases, as in the present biennium, result primarily from the expense of new or expanded programs authorized by the General Assembly and from efforts to more fully carry out responsibilities which have long existed."

He noted that general revenue appropriations for the 1959-60 year of the biennium would be $201,200,000, an increase of $9,900,000 over the current year. The appropriation for the 1960-61 fiscal year would be $201,400,000.

Change of Plans.

Gov. Blair at first planned to deliver his general and budget messages tomorrow, but changed his mind and decided to give them today. He was prompted by the desire of the legislative leaders to get an earlier start on their program, and by the fact that many members of the Senate want to attend the funeral of Mrs. Mike Kinney, wife of the veteran Senate Democratic leader, in St. Louis tomorrow.

Gov. Blair backed the St. Louis earnings tax proposal after being assured that city legislators are in substantial agreement on it. He previously said he would not work for the measure as long as the city's delegation was split.

Elimination of the ceiling on the tax would permit the St. Louis Board of Aldermen to submit to city voters a charter amendment proposing an increase in the levy. The tax could not be increased unless approved by a three-fifths majority.

The state enabling act prohibits an earning tax in excess of one-half of 1 per cent, the rate now being charged. The tax produces more than $10,000,000 a year, but the City Administration said an increase is necessary because the city will have a $2,500,000 deficit at the end of the fiscal year March 31.

Local Tax Rises.

Two other proposals to permit an increase in local taxes also were recommended by Blair. He asked that the State Constitution be amended to allow counties to increase property taxes from 50 cents to $1 on each $100 assessed valuation without a vote of the people. He said this is needed because 70 or 80 counties which now levy the maximum cannot meet their budgets.

Blair proposed that school districts be permitted to increase their bonded indebtedness from 10 per cent of the total assessed valuation of property in the district to 15 or 20 per cent. The requirement for a two-thirds majority to increase the debt limit should be changed to a simple majority, he said.

In discussing other major items in his legislative program, Blair declared the recent Chicago school fire demonstrated the need for a state program for fire protection under a state agency empowered to enforce fire safety standards.

"We must not wait until tragedy leads us to the needed remedy," he said.

The State Highway Patrol, Blair asserted, must have full police authority to combat crime effectively. He said the patrolmen are handicapped by the present law, which limits their search and seizure powers to the public roads.

A spring primary election would be preferable to the present system of holding the election in August, when many persons are on vacation, the Governor said.

Sentencing Proposal.

Under the indeterminate sentencing proposal, Missouri juries would continue to decide the guilt or innocence of the defendant, but would not fix the punishment. Those convicted of crimes would be sentenced to an indefinite term and released when considered rehabilitated.

Under the present system there are wide variations in punishments assessed by juries, or by judges before whom pleas of guilty are made, for similar crimes. The Governor declared that "this is manifestly unfair," and creates bitterness among prisoners.

In the interests of highway safety, he urged enactment of a strict law against "drag" racing with heavy penalties, regardless of whether the driver was involved in an accident. He recommended adoption of chemical tests for drunkenness in driving, and said violations should be punishable as graded felonies.

He also proposed that the State Highway Commission be authorized to prescribe speed, parking and other traffic regulations on state highways in cities and towns.

The Legislature was asked to increase welfare payments an average of $5 a month, and to vote funds for the hospitalization of the recipients under new federal contributory programs authorized by the last Congress. These recommendations would increase welfare expenditures in the two years by $17,653,000, of which the Government would pay $10,794,125.

Blair declared that one of the state's most serious problems arises from overcrowded conditions in mental hospitals due to the large number of senile patients, "many of whom have been placed in the hospitals by relatives simply to get rid of them."

He said these persons are not treatable as mental patients and would be better off if placed in nursing or boarding homes at state expense.

Blair recommended the state pay for their care in private homes, provided the charge did not exceed the per capita cost of the patient in a state hospital. He pointed out that many of these persons could qualify for old-age assistance or aid to the disabled. Since many also have social security benefits, the cost to the state under this program would be considerably less than the expense of institutional care.

Installment Measure.

In urging state regulation of retail installment financing of consumer goods, the Governor said his attention has been called to cases of "unscrupulous sellers victimizing retail buyers by exacting unconscionable finance charges and requiring the buyer to purchase insurance he does not want or need."

The Governor requested enactment of a law fixing finance and insurance charges in such transactions, asserting the buyer is entitled to know what he is being charged for and how much it costs.

Blair also recommended that the State Constitution be amended to permit Missouri Governors to succeed themselves in office. He pointed out that such an amendment, which would be voted on at the 1960 general election, could not apply to him.

The change, he said, would give the people an opportunity to vote to retain in office a Governor who had proved his qualifications and earned their confidence.

In his message Blair submitted 11 recommendations for reorganization of administrative offices and agencies of state government. Many of his suggestions were based on proposals recommended four years ago by the state reorganization (Little Hoover) Commission.

Blair said the Governor should be permitted by executive order to put into effect a plan or plans for reorganization of executive agencies, unless the plans were disapproved by either house of the Legislature. Under his proposal, a reorganization plan would be presented to the Assembly within 30 days of the start of a regular session. Unless either or both houses disapproved the plan within 60 days after the session opened, it would become effective.

The "Little Hoover" proposals resubmitted by Blair included one to set up an administrative management unit, and this was linked with recommendations for further mechanization of accounting and payroll.

He also suggested establishment of a separate State Department of Mental Health, under a new Mental Health Commission and independent of the present Department of Health and Welfare.

Other recommendations included the setting up of a joint licensing board for medical doctors and osteopaths.

Rights Mentioned.

In conclusion, the Governor mentioned human rights. Recalling that in administering the oath to departments of police he had emphasized their responsibility to uphold human rights, Blair said:

"In the struggle for man's rights, none of us can be a neutralist. We cannot stand above or aside from this battle. We must remain always combatants.

"Always and everywhere I will identify myself with any victim of oppression or discrimination, whoever or wherever he may be, and I will support him, and in that support I enlist your aid."

Earnings Tax

bers, Oscar A. Ehrhardt, said he was hopeful the proposed legislation could be submitted to the full board for approval at the next board meeting, which is next Tuesday.

"There is no question we have to do something to raise additional revenue," Ehrhardt said. "We have to have at least $2,500,000 on hand when we enter the next fiscal year to carry us over until the tax collections start coming in late next fall.

"With this $1,500,000 reduction in our anticipated revenue, we won't have nearly enough to carry us through the first few months of the next school year."

Ehrhardt said he also favors subitting a bill to the Legislature to give the school board a voice in setting evaluations. This would prevent such reductions as that made by the Merchants and Manufacturers' Tax Equilization Board without consulting the agencies which would be affected, he said.

Worsening the school board's financial situation, Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey told board members yesterday that enrollment this year had increased by about 5000 pupils. Teacher needs were based on an anticipated increase of only 1400, he said.

Thus, he told board members, he will need far more teachers in the next school year than he originally planned to seek. The tentative budget for the next school year, based on the $1.51 tax rate, calls for hiring 40 more teachers.

U.S.-BRITISH ALUMINUM COMBINE CLOSING DEAL

LONDON, Jan. 7 (UPI)—A half-American combine appears likely today to win control of the $112,000,000 British Aluminum Co., it was reported here.

The Financial Times said the combine, comprising Reynolds Metals of the United States and Britain's Tube Investments, was within $700,000 of a majority of the aluminum company's outstanding stock when the exchange here closed yesterday.

ACTOR FACES DRUG CHARGE

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 7 (AP)—Actor Jay Robinson, who played the role of Emperor Caligula in "The Robe," must answer charges of possessing and selling narcotics.

A fellow actor, Rod Lynn, testified at Robinson's preliminary hearing yesterday that he made two purchases of narcotics with marked money in Robinson's home last Nov. 12 and 13. He said he handed Robinson marked bills supplied by the sheriff's narcotics detail, and that Robinson gave him heroin. Robinson is to appear Jan. 21 for arraignment.

DIVORCE FOR DONNA ATWOOD

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 7 (AP)—Ice skating star Donna Atwood yesterday was granted a divorce, $2000-a-month alimony, $375 monthly support for her three children, and title to the $300,000 family home.

Miss Atwood obtained the divorce after telling the court that John H. Harris, her husband for eight years, was rude to her friends and had a bad temper. She starred in many of the ice extravaganzas staged by her husband. He did not contest the suit.

Halleck Wins

three White House aids met with Halleck. He implied they supported his rival. Halleck said, "I'm absolutely certain the White House did not intervene."

The White House refrained from any interference in the leadership contest, Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said today when questioned.

When Martin was asked whether Vice President Richard M. Nixon had a hand in the revolt, he replied:

"I don't know. All I know is that all the Nixon men were against me—actively against me."

He added that a reported insurgent leader, Representative Bob Wilson of California, Nixon's home state, "was inspired to do it."

Halleck, 58 years old, is a tough and resourceful professional who has served in Congress since 1935. He was elected on the second ballot, the first vote being 73 for Halleck and 72 for Martin, with one vote spoiled.

Following Halleck's election, the Republicans by voice vote chose Representative John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin, a Halleck supporter, as chairman of their policy committee, a post formerly held by Martin. Byrnes, 45 years old, was a principal author of the "big spender" charge used by the Republicans against the Democrats in the last election.

Halleck said he did not know what would happen to Representative Leslie C. Arends of Illinois, minority whip. Arends presumably will be replaced.

The defeat was a tragedy for Martin, who until recently has walked with the aid of a cane and who stood shaken before the television cameras to pledge continued loyalty to the party.

"This is my first defeat in 50 years," he said with a bewildered air and a frail attempt at a smile. "I am unaccustomed to it."

This is the same Martin who was excoriated in 1940 by President Roosevelt as a member of the isolationist team of Martin, Barton and Fish. It is the same Martin who threw a delegate out of the 1956 Republican convention, over which he presided, for proposing the name of "Joe Smith" as an alternative to Nixon.

Halleck, who thought erroneously in 1948 he had the vice presidential nomination sewed up and who was extremely bitter when rejected by the advisers of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, was chosen to nominate President Eisenhower for a second term at the 1956 convention.

Martin served as Speaker of the House in 1947-1948 and has had a close working relationship with Speaker Rayburn, who celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary yesterday. Some of those dissatisfied with Martin have said the Rayburn relationship was too close.

Representative Thomas B. Curtis of Webster Groves, Mo., interpreted the Halleck victory as reflecting a desire for "new leadership." He said there was no factional fight involved. He noted Halleck is "very articulate" while Martin is not. He declined to say how he voted.

The possibility of a Martin overthrow had been discussed in Washington for several weeks but was not taken too seriously by most observers. The vote was a shock to the Capital, and was obviously brought off by a fast last-minute drive by Halleck and his supporters. Also, Martin's position was weakened by the fact several of his New England friends retired from Congress.

The fact that the House fight had nothing to do with the liberal-conservative dispute that has split Senate Republicans was demonstrated during yesterday's session. Martin was nominated by Representative Richard M. Simpson of Pennsylvania and Halleck by Representative Noah M. Mason of Illinois. It would be difficult to find two men more deeply conservative than Mason and Simpson.

Mason reportedly told the Republicans "the trouble with the country" was the Eisenhower leadership. He said he thought Halleck would exert leadership in Congress. At the conclusion of voting Martin and Halleck made brief harmony speeches.

The meeting behind closed glass doors of the House chamber attracted a large crowd of reporters and photographers who could view part of the proceedings without being able to hear anything. It was something like viewing a baseball game through a knothole, with only the outfielders in sight.

Asked by the Post-Dispatch what his strategy had been and when the movement for him had started, Halleck replied there had been no personal effort on his part, that conversations had been under way ever since the party lost in 1954. He returned to Washington Thursday night, he said, learned several meetings had been held and attended several more. That, he implied, was about all there was to it.

ready had the cigar, whether he bought it in the store, or whether it had been given to him.

Casper said he was an inveterate cigar smoker.

Asked Permission.

Donohue said he was in the place for 15 minutes on Jan. 2, entering at about 3:30 p.m. He said he has asked his superior for permission to go to the vicinity of Delmar and Skinker boulevard to see a dress salesman who frequented the area.

It was Donohue's intention, he said, to talk to the salesman about buying a dress for Donohue's wife. He said he found the salesman at 6234 Delmar.

Sgt. Pelham said he left Police Headquarters downtown on Dec. 24 to go to Sullivan, Mo., where he planned to spend Christmas eve with relatives. He stopped at a restaurant near the suspected gambling establishment, he said, and had to pass it on his way to a gasoline service station.

In walking to the service station, Sgt. Pelham told Thompson, he met an acquaintance standing in front of the shop and stopped briefly to talk. He said he then walked on without entering the shop.

Cpl. Roth said he was in the establishment at 12:30 p.m. on Dec. 23, when he stopped to buy a box of cigars. He said he paid $3.50 for the cigars. Miller said he stopped in between 10 and 11 a.m. on Dec. 17 to get a carton of cigarettes. He said he paid $2.30 for the carton.

Lts. Greenspan and Davis were ordered suspended from duty for "conduct unbecoming an officer" pending outcome of a Police Board investigation.

Ordered by O'Connell.

The suspensions, effective immediately, were ordered by Police Chief Jeremiah O'Connell, who directed Thompson to receive written reports from the two officers and to take action if their explanations were unsatisfactory.

Greenspan, assigned to the Penrose street station, and Davis, stationed in the Carondelet District, turned their badges over to Thompson at the conclusion of a meeting with the Inspector at Police Headquarters yesterday. The two were taken to their districts to surrender their cap insignia.

The two police lieutenants contended their suspensions were unjustified. They acknowledged they had been in the Delmar establishment, but disclaimed any knowledge of gambling activities.

Greenspan told the Post-Dispatch: "I was there only twice in my life. The first time was to buy cigarettes and to see if they would exchange cigars I received for Christmas for a brand I smoke. The second visit was to bring the cigars to be exchanged."

Saw No Gambling.

The police officer said his second visit followed the first by four days.

"I never saw any evidence of gambling," he stated. "There were only a few people sitting in the front part of the shop. The door to the back room was wide open, and nothing was going on there."

Greenspan said he knew Victor Padratzik and Louis Kitchen, who were charged in warrants with occupying the Delmar premises for the purpose of recording bets following a police raid Sunday. A second raid was conducted Monday night.

Greenspan said he knew Kitchen better than Padratzik, because he had arrested Kitchen as a robbery suspect in 1935. The charge against Kitchen was dropped because of insufficient evidence, he said.

The police lieutenant stated he dealt with Kitchen during his two visits to the establishment on Delmar.

Davis told a reporter that in his report submitted to Thompson, he repeated an earlier explanation of his vists to the Delmar shop.

He had said he went to the place occasionally to buy cigars and cigarettes from Padratzik, who had gone to grammar school with him. Davis, who lives a few blocks away, stated he has his car serviced at a nearby filling station.

The police officer denied any knowledge of gambling at the establishment. Asked if he was aware that Padratzik had been arrested frequently for gambling, Davis hesitated a moment and then said:

"It seems to me I heard something about that."

Davis said he was "disgusted" because of the suspension and said he was considering resigning from the department and seeking other employment.

However, he added: "I'm going to stick this thing through until it's all over. I'm not going to resign under charges."

On Force 29 Years.

Greenspan, who will observe his twenty-ninth anniversary as a member of the department next Tuesday, has had a fluctuating career as a policeman.

He soon made a good impression on his superiors after joining the department Jan. 13, 1930. His work as an arson investigator drew attention of high police officials and insurance underwriters, and he was promoted to sergeant in 1937.

Assigned to the secret service division, he toured the city at night, checking on taverns and night clubs. In the process, he became acquainted with gamblers and other underworld figures.

His alertness resulted in the arrest of George Couch, former convict sought in the murder of a policeman. Greenspan, stopping an altercation between a man and a woman downtown, found the man was Couch, who was subsequently sentenced to life in prison.

Promoted.

In 1945, Greenspan was promoted to lieutenant. When assigned to the Page Boulevard District, he and two other officers caught a former convict in a safe burglary at the CIO United Automobile Workers Union. Greenspan was injured seriously when kicked by the ex-convict. The Police Board promoted him to captain in April 1954, and he was returned to the secret service division.

In October 1955, Greenspan and Davis were named in indictments charging that they accepted bribes from brothel operators. The indictments followed a series of disclosures by the Post-Dispatch regarding alleged pay-offs to policemen.

Greenspan was charged with accepting bribes from Ethel Clift and Grace Cavitt to permit operation of a brothel in the 4300 block of Chouteau avenue.

Mistrial Declared.

After a long delay caused by numerous continuances granted by the Circuit Court, Greenspan was brought to trial June 11, 1956, but a mistrial was declared the following day because of the death of a brother of Morris Shenker, defense attorney.

Greenspan never went to trial again. The charges were dismissed by a new circuit attorney, Thomas F. Eagleton, last January because the state's chief witness could not be found.

The Police Board, which had conducted its own inquiry into the alleged pay-offs, absolved Greenspan on that score but demoted him to lieutenant for violating police regulations in connection with trips to Las Vegas, Nev.

Edward L. Dowd, Eagleton's predecessor as circuit attorney, had discovered that Greenspan on four occasions in 1955 had his hotel bills in Las Vegas paid by Sidney Wyman, former St. Louis gambler.

Is Transferred.

Following his demotion, the 55-year-old police officer was transferred from the Secret Service Division to the Penrose Street District.

Davis has been a member of the police department since 1941. He entered military service in 1942 but returned to duty as a policeman in August 1945.

In 1947, he was promoted to corporal, after he jumped from a patrol wagon to capture a pickpocket being chased by two men. He previously had caught a burglar sought for a number of crimes downtown.

Promoted to sergeant in 1949 and assigned to the Secret Service division, Davis and a detective shot and killed Clarence Williams, who had held up and disarmed a policeman. Three years earlier, Davis and another policeman shot and killed a burglar who drew a knife when they sought to arrest him.

Since becoming a lieutenant June 1, 1952, Davis has served in the Ruskin, Deer, Magnolia, Page and Carondelet districts.

He was brought to trial on the charge of accepting bribes from a brothel operator but was acquitted Sept. 8, 1956, by a circuit court grand jury.

When Davis was reinstated to duty without loss of rank, the Police Board said he would not receive the $5592 in salary lost during the period of his suspension.

The Board withheld the money as a penalty for "inefficient police duty" for failing to take "proper action" against a brothel in the Page Boulevard District.

Davis has filed suit to recover the $5592. It is pending.

Cuban Torture

of a hand and two inches thick. One of the rebels guarding this empty jail explained that a prisoner's hand was wired to the device with his finger protruding through a hole. The nail then was pulled slowly off with pliers or tweezers.

The rebel explained that the iron blocks were used alternately to burn the soles of a prisoner's feet. He said it is heated and then bound to the bare foot.

Castro, flushed with his revolutionary victory, expects to remain a primary force in the affairs of the new Cuban republic. He made this clear in a brief interview with the Post-Dispatch and in a major public speech in this provincial capital before continuing to Havana today.

Will Protect Freedom.

He disavowed any personal desire for supreme power. At the same time he pledged himself to protect personally the new freedom of the Cuban people. He also left open the possibility that he would eventually become president.

The reference to the presidency was made in the interview, in the crowded second floor landing of a house in the outskirts of Santa Clara, where Castro stopped for a few hours before proceeding into the city.

Asked if he had any message for the people of the United States, he balked at first and then said only that he wished for the best possible relations with the United States.

"But I want you to know that I am not the president," he explained. "It is not my work to speak about international affairs."

He went on to say he had placed himself entirely under the orders of Dr. Manuel Urrutia, who has been installed in Havana as provisional president.

Castro was asked if he expected later to become president himself.

"I am only 32," he protested. The Cuban Constitution requires that the president be at least 35 years old.

Pressed for a comment on his plans after he reaches 35, he said, "After that, I don't know."

Hard Work Ahead.

Castro spoke for 90 minutes before a crowd of about 5000 persons in the city's central square. Now that the revolution is won, the task is to set up a government that never again can fall into dictatorship, he said. "We learned to fight, and now we can learn to run the country," he declared. But he added this means lots of training and hard work.

Everyone must be trained in the use of arms. One reason it took two years and one month to overthrow Batista was that an untrained people was pitted against trained soldiers with guns, tanks, planes and ships, he explained.

Firearms will no longer be carried on the street, however. Castro said these had been used under the old regime to intimidate the people. Under the new government, he said, a soldier going off duty must leave his rifle at the military post.

Gambling Outlawed.

Gambling will be prohibited. Castro lumped gambling with cheating, stealing, crime, graft and nepotism as evils of the old regime which will not be tolerated by the new government.

Student revolutionists will not be rewarded by being given undeserved diplomas, he warned. He added that there must be no more armed student organizations.

"The students must study," he said. "We need capacity—not false graduates but trained people."

He said also that there must be no more student strikes, which he described as "a shame for our country."

He promised a free press and free speech, noting that Cuba had suffered six years under a controlled press.

In a news conference after his speech, Castro said land reform would be undertaken throughout the country, but he gave no details. He scoffed at speculation that the new Cuban republic might nationalize some private industries.

"Who was the fool that asked such a thing as that?" he asked.

He disavowed any intention of changing the constitution, pointing out that the revolution was fought in support of the constitution.

Castro's entry into Santa Clara demonstrated the consummate showmanship that helped him capture the imagination of his people and finally oust the dictatorship.

He left behind the powder blue 1957 Chevrolet, equipped with short wave radio, in which he rode to the house outside Santa Clara.

When he emerged from the house, he strode instead to a waiting open jeep, which already was loaded with bearded revolutionary fighters.

Climbing in, he sat on the back of a seat, slung his Swiss carbine with the telescopic sight across one shoulder and poked a big black Cuban cigar into his mouth.

Crowds lined the route into the city, cheering, clapping and singing at their first sight of the leader of the long fight.

NASA ESTABLISHES OFFICE FOR FOREIGN CO-OPERATION

NASA said the new office will have only a small staff and will deal largely with the planning phase of space and aviation research and development on the international scale.

SHARP BREAK ON PROFIT - TAKING RAID IN STOCKS

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press International Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Stocks today had their sharpest decline since the 14.68-point break in th eindustrial average on Nov. 24. Selling that had been well absorbed most of the day developed greater pressure at closing time with the tickers falling behind the market. Widest declines came into the recent favorites which included many issues making up the averages.

Du Pont was driven down more than 7 points. Eastman Kodak dropped more than 3. Chrysler lost 2, United States Steeel more than 3 and General Electric more than 2.

Declines of 3 points or more came into National Cash Register, Bendix Aviation, Alcoa, Inland Steel, and several others. A long list fell 2 points or more including Thiokol, Hercules Powder, Illinois Central, Western Maryland, Goodyear, Vick Chemical, American Home Products, Bristol-Myers, Cocoa-Cola, Georgia Pacific, and U. S. Gypsum.

Several reasons for the decline were advanced but the general belief was that it represented nothing more than a technical setback after a prolonged rise.

The market had risen in the previous seven sessions, making a new high record each trading day until the value of all listed issues had risen by eleven billion dollars.

Some weight was given as a factor in the seling to a statement by Economist Marcus Nadler who warned that stocks should be sold for profit at this time.

Also the traders were given a shudder or two from a Wall Street Journal dispatch saying that the new "liberal-packed congress which goes to work today, will put business on the defensive as it hasn't been since New Deal days."

Business news was seen as favorable, and many bargain hunters seized the decline as an opportunity to buy stocks. American Telephone was a favorite of the investors all day and at its high was up 5 points. It closed with a rise of 2¾ points.

The Associated Press reported that the ticker tape was late on eight occasions in spurts of very active dealing.

Of 1259 issues traded, 790 fell and 302 rose. There were 80 new highs for the year and 4 new lows, American Chicle, Amphenol-Borge Electronics, Johnson & Johnson (when issued) and Lockheed (when issued).

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped $2.30 to $214.70, with the industrials down $4.60, the rails down $2.00 and the utilities up 10c.

The drop was the sharpest in the A.P. average since Nov. 24 when the loss was $5.20.

Volume was 4,140,000 shares compared with 3,690,000 yesterday.

U.S. Economy Today

1958 EARNINGS OF NATION'S BANKS

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—The tides of business recession and recovery and of tight and easy money are shown clearly today in the earnings of the nation's banks.

The majority reports doing as well or better in making money as a year ago. But for the first time in several years their gains are small and their profits are coming from different sources.

Sam Dawson

And a sizable number of banks are reporting they made less in 1958 than in 1957.

Business didn't go to the banks for loans as often or for as much last year as the year before. And the Federal Reserve System's easy money policy in fighting the recession gave the banks a smaller return on such money as they lent.

BUT WHILE THESE TWO streams cut into banking profits, especially in the first half of last year, they also worked somewhat at cross currents since June. Most of the banks are reporting that while profits on loans to business declined, they were able in the second half of the year to increase their earnings on securities. When U.S. bond prices took a bad tumble at mid year, the banks could pick up some bargains that yield them well. And then the U.S. Treasury had to borrow a lot of money to meet the Federal deficit, and it had to pay more interest for such loans. So that new U.S. securities yield them well, too. The bull market in stock helped financial institutions readjust any such portfolios with pleasant gains.

THE BUSINESS RECOVERY hasn't sent corporations back to the lending counters of banks as many first hoped. For example, in the last six months of the year business loans by New York banks picked up by only $59,000,000. For the entire year loans are $707,000,000 lower than in 1957. Reasons given for the tardy return of business to borrowing: Many corporations have completed their ambitious post-Korean war expansions programs, and have less need for funds; many concerns are playing it very cautious still and asking for little banking aid in rebuilding inventories; depreciation allowances on the plants and equipment set up during the big business spending boom are now helping corporations to increase their cash flow and take care of current financial needs, with the help of their slowly increasing earnings. But as the recovery progresses and business men grow more confident, the banks look for a modest return to the big business and swelling profits they reported a couple of years back.

AMONG LEADING BANKS reporting gains in 1958, despite the problems, are the nation's biggest, California's Bank of America; the Crocker National and American Trust, both of San Francisco; Security-First National and California Bank, both of Los Angeles; First National, City National, and Continental Illinois National, all of Chicago; the First National City, Manufacturers Trust, New York Trust, Marine Midland Trust, Bank of New York, and Chemical Corn Exchange, all of New York City. Among those falling off a bit last year are: The First National Bank of Boston; Detroit Bank & Trust; and Guaranty Trust, Bankers Trust, United States Trust, Irving Trust and Hanover Bank, all of New York City.

BANK CLEARINGS.

St. Louis bank clearings for Jan. 7 were $76,900,000 compared with $70,000,000 a year ago.

WHOLESALE FOOD PRICE INDEX OFF 2.7 PCT. FROM JAN. '58

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—Wholesale food prices, as measured by the Dun & Bradstreet Inc. food index, declined sharply this week. At $6.24 the index compared with $6.35 a week ago and was 2.7 per cent below the first week of 1958, when the index stood at $6.41. The decline was the sharpest week-to-week drop since late September and the figure was the lowest since the 1958 low of $6.23 in the week ended Oct. 14.

The index represents the total cost of one pound each of 31 foods in general use.

Higher this week were flour, wheat, corn, rye, oats, lard, milk, coffee, tea, peanuts and eggs.

Lower were barley, hams, bellies, butter, cheese, sugar, cottonseed oil, cocoa, potatoes and hogs.

MALLINCKRODT SETS UP SEPARATE NUCLEAR FIRM

Mallinckrodt Chemical Works has established a separate, wholly-owned subsidiary to carry out the firm's privately-owned, nuclear fuels business, Joseph Fistere, president of the firm, announced today.

The new firm, Mallinckrodt Nuclear, will take over the facilities and personnel of the firm's special metals division. This includes a $2,000,000 nuclear fuel production plant at Hematite, Mo., and sales and administrative offices in St. Louis, Fister said. Fistere will serve as president and director of the new corporation, and Frederick M. Belmore, who now heads the special metals division, will be vice president, director, and general manager.

The Hematite plant has processed more than 150,000 pounds of enriched uranium since 1956. The process involves the transforamtion of uranium hexafluoride, a gaseous compound, into forms and compounds suitable for use in nuclear reactors.

U.S. BONDS MAKE SMALL GAINS IN QUIET TRADE

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—United States Government bonds scored small gains in quiet trading today.

Over the counter dealers quoted long term and intermediate government bonds 2-32 to 4-32 higher. The short term issues were called unchanged.

Corporates were mixed. Some convertible issues declined in sympathy with weakness in the stock market. Public utilities generally were lower, but rail bonds held up well.

VATICAN QUESTIONS TWO EXILE REGIMES

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 7 (UPI)—The Vatican no longer recognizes ambassadors from the anti-Communist governments-in-exile of Poland and Lithuania because they cannot produce credentials acceptable under international law, the Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano reports.

The Vatican, however, still does not recognize the Communist governments of those or any other Red nations.

The Vatican newspaper also announced that the Polish embassy and Lithuanian legation would remain open under a charge d'affaires. It did not make clear if this constituted continued recognition of the so-called "government-in-exile."

Deplores Decision.

Osservatore Romano stressed that the decision to refuse to recognize the two ambassadors was not a "political" one, but a "technical legal" conclusion.

"Now it happens that, as the result of a situation too well known to need dwelling upon, the Polish and Lithuanian representatives are not in a position to produce documents which can be recognized of diplomatic character and value under international law," the newspaper said.

"It is a painful situation which the Holy See is the first to deplore. But, not withstanding, it remains an unquestionable fact. As a result, obviously the Holy See finds itself unable to recognize the continuation of the title of chiefs of respective missions for the illustrious diplomats who have held it thus far."

Accredited by Pius XII

This meant that Casimir Papee, ambassador for the Polish government-in-exile since that government was formed when Nazi Germany invaded Poland, would no longer carry the title.

Nor would Stanislas Girdvainis, minister for the Lithuanian government-in-exile since Russia absorbed his country, be able to carry his title.

Both were accredited to the pontificate of the late Pope Pius XII before their countries were occupied, so remained in their positions throughout his reign.

When all ambassadors were asked for credentials to the pontificate of Pope John XXIII, as is customary when a new Pope is elected, the Polish and Lithuanian diplomats had no real government to turn to for credentials.

Sun a Factor in Calculating Velocity of Russia's Rocket

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK JR.
© New York Times News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—Many considerations, some of them literally out of this world, enter into the calculation of the Soviet space rocket's speed.

After it escapes the earth's influence the most important of these considerations is the sun, around which the vehicle is expected to orbit as an artificial planet.

The picture is also complicated by the fact that the rocket's velocity can be considered in several ways—with respect to the earth, with erspect to the sun or even with respect to the moon.

An expert has calculated that it started from earth with a velocity of 36,700 feet a second. The rocket's speed must diminish gradually thereafter as the object slips through earth's gravitational fingers, so to speak, and escapes.

This slowing process continues to a point somewhat more than 1,000,000 miles from earth, at which the planet's gravitational pull on the vehicle has become almost infinitely small and therefore of no great importance.

Krafft Ehricke, rocket expert of Convair-Astronautics in San Diego, has calculated the velocity at this point at 7200 feet a second with respect to the earth. For its speed with respect to the sun Ehricke added 99,000 feet a second (earth's orbital speed) on the assumption that the rocket was aimed to take advantage of earth's motion around the sun.

Thus the vehicle's speed with respect to the sun would be 106,200 feet a second.

As the probe crossed the orbit of the moon, roughly 240,000 miles from earth, the velocity had dropped to 15,224 miles a second, Soviet scientists reported. This is equivalent to a little more than 7000 feet a second (with respect to the earth), a figure that agrees rather closely with an estimate of about 8000 feet a second made by Ehricke.

Ultimately, Ehricke said, the vehicle can be expected to assume an eliptical orbit around the sun.

In this path its velocity might properly be considered with respect to the sun since both the probe and earth are sun satellites.

Considered in this fashion the probe will have an orbital velocity ranging roughly from 106,000 feet a second to 82,000 feet a second, Ehricke said. Like all such satellites it would move fastest at perihelion (closest approach to the sun) and slowest at aphelion (farthest point from the sun).

FATHER INCREDULOUS, FIRST GIRL IN FAMILY IN 200 YEARS

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 7 (UPI)—It was difficult for Glenn Holmgrain to believe that his wife had given birth to a girl.

"Are you positively, absolutely sure it's a girl?" He saked the nurse who brought him the news yesterday. Quite definitely a girl, the nurse answered.

Holmgrain ran to the telephone and called his mother, Mrs. Eric Holmgrain, in Rock Island, Ill. Mrs. Holmgrain promptly caught a plane for Memphis.

Reason for all this extra excitement: The child was the first girl born in the Holmgrain family in 200 years.

Inner Mongolia Literacy.

TOKYO, Jan. 7 (AP) — The Peiping radio says 89.3 per cent of the people in the autonomous region of Inner Mongolia are now literate, an advance of 3,000,000 over the 1957 figure.

HENNINGS WILL SEEK REPEAL OF THIRD-TERM BAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —Senator Thomas C. Hennings (Dem.), Missouri, said yesterday he will ask Congress to call for repeal of the new constitutional bar on a third term for Presidents.

He said the Twenty-second Amendment weakens the powers of the President in his final years in office even more than the former two-term tradition did.

The late President Franklin D. Roosevelt was the only President ever elected to serve more than two terms.

"We all have seen how the Twenty-second Amendment has adversely affected President Eisenhower," Hennings said in a statement. "From the very day of his re-election, the President began to lose control of his own political party and his power to influence the opposition party vanished."

While asking repeal of the limiting amendment, Hennings said he felt the anti-third term tradition was a "healthy political heritage."

"This tradition itself is enough to prevent more than a rare departure from the practice of serving only two terms," he said. "This nation survived some difficult times while operating under this tradition. But times are difficult now, and the present time demands a strong President operating, within constitutional limits, at full power. Under the Twenty-second Amendment, presidential strength is weakened."

Repeal of the amendment would require approval of a resolution to that effect by two-thirds of both houses of Congress and ratification by three-fourths of the states.

'GIVEAWAY' JURY VERDICTS IN AUTO CASES DENOUNCED

A "giveaway program" by juries all over the country in highway accident cases is one of the main reasons for rising insurance rates, Adlai H. Rust, chairman of the board of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. said here today.

Rust said a $15,000 verdict "is nothing unusual today" in a case in which the company might expect to pay $2500. He said juries do not seem to understand that the bills are being paid by all insured persons, not by the companies. "The companies only do the arithmetic," he said.

Attending a regional convention of State Farm Mutual agents here, Rust cited two other reasons for climbing rates: Increased medical costs and higher automobile repair charges. He said the main hope for lower rates is in community action to reduce accidents.

NIXON, PRESIDENT DISCUSS FUTURE G.O.P. POLICIES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —Vice President Richard M. Nixon said last night he and Republican organization leaders had canvassed future party policies with President Eisenhower Monday night.

Although Nixon declined to give any details of the White House meeting, it was learned elsewhere that he, National Chairman Meade Alcorn and other party officials discussed methods of clarifying in the public's mind the political image of the party.

Nixon, a potential candidate for the G.O.P. presidential nomination in 1960, is reported to feel the Democrats won heavy majorities in the Senate and House because they were successful in selling the theme that they are looking out for the little man.

Alcorn was said to share this view and to be eager for Mr. Eisenhower's help in attempts to bring about more Republican unity behind programs calculated to be appealing to the voters in 1960.

COUNTY POLICEMEN WIN PROMOTIONS

Six promotions in the St. Louis county police department were announced today by Superintendent Raymond W. Hensley. They will become effective Jan. 16, and involve no change in assignment.

Two sergeants were raised to the rank of lieutenant with an increase in pay from $4780 to $5500 annually. They are Thomas L. Brown, 51 years old, of 4408 Eminence avenue, Berkeley, assigned to the headquarters division, and Stewart E. Ducey, 34, 8721 Magdalen avenue, Brentwood, assigned to the deputy superintendent's office. Both men are former deputy sheriffs who joined the department when it was established July 1, 1955.

Two men raised from acting sergeant are Austin B. Duke, 34, 4037 Wright avenue, St. Ann, of the detective bureau, and Edwin J. Hanneken, 30, 10020 Maeburn terrace, Crestwood, assigned to the vice squad. As acting sergeants, both received a patrolman's pay of $4608 a year. Duke, a former St. Louis policeman, joined the department in March 1956. Hanneken, former deputy sheriff, has been with it since it was established.

Promoted from patrolman to acting sergeant were William A. Cook, 26, 25 Dwyer place, Ladue, of the security division, and Sylvester A. Gansmann, 50, 4750 Diana drive, Mehlville, personnel division. Cook has been with the department since July 15, 1955, and Gansmann since the start. Both will continue to receive their patrolman's pay but will have enlarged responsibilities.

MARKET MANAGER GETS $20 'OWED FROM STEALING'

Thomas Stone, manager of a supermarket at 4510 Page boulevard, was quite surprised today. He received an envelope in the mail containing $20 and a brief note of explanation.

"Here's $20 I owe you from stealing at your Delmar store," the note read. The store formerly was at 4663 Delmar boulevard. "I was overwhelmed," Stone said. "There's always some stealing going on; it's an occupational hazard in our business."

Stone said he would turn the money over to charity. "Somebody's conscience bothered them," he said, "and the money probably resulted from a New Year's resolution."

The note was unsigned and there was no return address.

GROUP FORMED TO ATTEMPT TO SAVE HISTORICAL SITES

A 12-member committee has been formed to attempt to preserve significant historical sites and buildings here and to develop other valuable areas for future use, it was announced today.

Known as the Committee on Preservation and Development of St. Louis, the group was established as an outgrowth of a committee on growth and development set up by the League of Women Voters under the chairmanship of Mrs. John W. Seddon. Chairman of the new group is Dean Joseph R. Passoneau of the Washington University School of Architecture.

Passoneau said the group already has undertaken efforts to preserve the Bissell mansion, which is to be razed in construction of the Mark Twain Expressway. A proposal for erecting a retaining wall to allow the historic mansion to remain has been submitted to the State Highway Department. The committee expects to seek suitable development of areas near the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial on the riverfront.

20-YEAR STUDY OF RADIATION IS PROPOSED

© New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON Jan. 7—A 20-year study of the effects of radiation on human beings was proposed yesterday by the committee on pathological effects of atomic radiation of the National Academy of Sciences.

Dr. Shields Warren, professor of pathology at Harvard and committee chairman, said that such a survey would be proposed to Congress within a year.

He said that it would involve the Public Health Service, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Defense Department and a number of other federal agencies. He estimated the cost at between $750,000 and $1,500,000 a year.

He said he recently held a meeting with representatives of federal agencies and private foundations interested in it.

2,000,000 to Be Studied.

At least 1,000,000 persons, he said, would be studied in each of two contrasting areas:

1. A high-level area of known high-radiation incidence from the sun's cosmic rays, in all probability the Colorado plateau with the large population areas of Denver or Salt Lake City or both, used as study material.

2. A sea-level area of known low radiation incidence, still to be chosen, but probably on the West Coast, since the prevailing winds in this country blow radiation easterly.

Dr. Warren said that fall-out radiation would not be a factor in this study because its present incidence is relatively very small. "But we've got to keep a careful eye on it," he added.

He said that the low-level area would serve as a "control" for the high, and that the proposed United States study would gain much by comparison with United Nations studies on populations in areas of much higher radiation levels than can be found here.

Broad Study Envisioned.

Dr. Warren said the proposed study would consist of studies of over-all vital statistics to find evidence of effects attributable to radiation, such as leukemia, bone cancer, and shortening of the life span.

It would include studies of how much other radiation the populations studied have received—from X-rays, medical treatments and other sources, including that due to migrations from other geographical areas.

He emphasized there are other known causes of leukemia, such as benzol and drugs now seldom used, and that there may be unknown causes adding to the great complexity of the inquiry.

Dr. Howard Andrews, radiation safety officer of the National Institutes of Health, who shared the National Academy of Sciences platform yesterday with Dr. Warren, said he wanted to add this thought on the importance of the proposed study:

"You could study in the laboratory 1,000,000 mice, and it would just be mice. You have to study men."

Differs With U.N. Report.

By United Press International

The committee took issue with parts of a United Nations report, issued last year. The committee indorsed the U.N. report in general but found fault with some of its statements and emphases.

For example, the U.N. report said unborn infants might suffer bodily malformations as a result of exposure in the womb during diagnostic X-ray examination of the mothers.

The United States committee said the heavier doses associated with radiation treatment might cause such malformations and that simple X-ray examination might induce leukemia in the unborn child.

However, there is no evidence, Warren said, that any child ever was born deformed in any way solely because a physician had examined its mother with X-rays.

FDA STUDIES LEGISLATION ON HOUSEHOLD CHEMICALS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Food and Drug Administration is considering recommending legislation to help protect children from misuse of common household chemicals.

Commissioner George P. Larrick told a meeting of staff members from Senators' and Representatives' offices that his agency would await the findings of the American Medical Association and Chemical Specialty Manufacturers Association before presenting FDA's views.

Larrick said the states had usually taken leadership in attempting to prevent misuse of household chemicals, but that many now think the Federal Government should act.

ACCEPTS RIDE OFFER AND THEN IS HELD UP

Elliott Taylor, 4416 Laclede avenue, was robbed of $12 early today by a man who offered him a ride in his automobile as Taylor waited for a bus at Broadway and Loughborough avenue. Police arrested a man they said admitted the robbery.

The suspect, Charles E. Standridge, 100 block of Lemay Ferry road, St. Louis county, was identified by Taylor as the person who picked him up and drove him to Osage and Marine avenue, where his money was taken.

Taylor, manager of the Carondelet Hotel, said another man and woman were in the front seat with the driver when he was offered the ride. He noted the automobile license number, and Standridge was arrested at the city limits soon after.

Soandridge, 25 years old, a truck driver, was held suspected of robbery. Detectives Leroy Aubertin and Ray Holtzmann quoted him as saying his unidentified companions, who were not in the car when he was arrested, were chance acquaintances he had met in a tavern. He turned $8 over to police.

Wellston police early today found a man hiding behind a furnace in the basement of a supermarket at 6356 Easton avenue. They said the man was Maynard Smith, 34, operator of a typewriter sales and repair shop across the street.

Smith was said to have admitted entering the market by sawing steel bars over a rear window. About $75 in whisey and cigarettes had been assembled in a shopper's cart. Smith, a former convict, was booked suspected of burglary and larceny.

Hejkel's Market at 2832 Arsenal street was robbed of $408 late yesterday afternoon, police reported. Miss Jean White, cashier, said a man with a revolver ordered her to open the cash register. Another man, who had brought a basket of groceries to the counter, fled with the robber. They ran down an alley and escaped.

300 Stranded by Snowdrifts.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Wind-blown snowdrifts up to 20 feet high stranded about 300 motorists many of them from the United States, in Napierville, Que., today. The travelers, some of them suffering from frotbite, sought refuge in hotels, garages and restaurants in Napierville.

CITY AWARDS CONTRACT FOR NEW WATER VALVES

A contract for furnishing butterfly valves for the city's new high pressure water conduit system was awarded by the Board of Public Service yesterday to the Baldwin-Hamilton Corp., of San Francisco.

The California firm's bid, lowest submitted, was $193,500. The valves will be installed in 78-inch mains between Chain of Rocks and the Baden and Bissell Point stations. The new system will replace gravity mains and will eliminate the Baden and Bissell Point stations.

The board announced it will receive bids next Feb. 10 for construction of a new clinic building adjacent to Homer G. Phillips Hospital. The building, estimated to cost $760,000, will be financed by funds from 1934 and 1944 bond issues.

E. GERMANY TO TRAIN 'RELIABLE' OFFICERS

© New York Times News Service

BERLIN, Jan. 7—A military academy, designed to supply the East German "peoples' army" with a professionally trained reliable Communist officer corps, was opened in Dresden Monday.

Soviet army representatives and military attaches of other Communist countries attended the elaborate inaugural ceremonies according to East German press reports.

Walter Ulbright, first secretary of the East German Communist party, made the key speech in which he made sharp reference to the problem of political reliability in the 110,000-man peoples' army. The question has agitated the party leadership since the fall of Soviet Marshal Georgi Zhukov in 1957 occasioned a parallel clean-up of East German professional soldiers found lacking in proper respect for their political mentors.

Ulbright said "sweeping changes in political education work" were necessary in the armed forces. Military leadership had as its first duty the raising of the socialist consciousness of officers and men and the creation of convinced, resolute fighters for the peoples' objectives, he said.

The army is now midway in transformation from a lightly armed force of World War II vintage into a limited copy of the Soviet army, equipped with rockets, supersonic aircraft and other modern arms.

Senior defense ministry officials and top staff officers in East Berlin are Communists who made their way to high authority in the party rather than military service. Field commands belong mostly to World War II professionals. It is the field commanders—apparently impatient with the unmilitary political agents forced onto their staffs—who are a source of difficulty.

AID PACT HELPED AIRLINE HOLD LOSSES TO $398,028

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP)—An airline mutual aid arrangement enabled Capital Airlines to hold its cash losses to less than $400,000 in a recent 37-day strike.

Figures filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board show that Capital sufefred an out-of-pocket loss totaling $2,646,000 as a result of a mechanics strike. This consisted of maintenance costs, rentals and other fixed obligations.

Other airlines gave Capital a total of $2,247,972 during the strike, cutting Capital's net loss to $398,028. However, Capital figures it suffered other losses, including diversion of traffic to other airlines—traffic that Capital will have to recapture. Also, Capital counts as losses the profits it would have made in the 37 days, if the strike had not been in effect.

RUSSIA URGES WEST CHANGE ATOM STAND

GENEVA, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Soviet Union insisted today that the United States and Britain drop their proposal to bar nuclear weapons tests on a year-by-year basis.

Soviet delegate Semyon Tsarapkin said Russia wanted this question settled now. The Russians want a permanent bar.

The two Western powers insisted that the suspension of atomic and hydrogen weapon tests must be subject to a year-by-year review to see how a control system was working.

Emerging from the meeting Tsarapkin told reporters: "How can we agree to set up an expensive control system that might only work for one year. The Western powers, themselves, have suggested making an administrator for the control system for a two-year period. That makes their year-by-year position nonsense."

Tsarapkin also criticized a new American technical paper that showed differentiating between underground nuclear blasts and earthquakes was more difficult than was original believed. He said: "This American paper is a step backward, it seems to us."

FUND BILL FOR BUILDING HERE MAY BE AMENDED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 7—The seventieth General Assembly may amend an appropriation bill enacted by the previous Legislature, Attorney General John M. Dalton held today.

The opinion had been requested by the State Division of Employment Security. At the last session of the Legislature, $2,400,000 was made available for the purchase of land and construction of an employment security office building in St. Louis.

The appropriation is due to expire June 30, but construction will not be completed by that time. Dalton held that the current session of the Legislature may amend the bill so the appropriation will still be available.

PRISONER FOUND HANGED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHESTER, Ill., Jan. 7 — Forrest Young of East St. Louis, who was sentenced to 75 years in prison for the murder of his wife, was found hanged last night in the psychiatric division of Menard State Penitentiary. Warden Ross V. Randolph said the inmate, 62 years old, previously had made several suicide attempts.

Randolph said the body was found hanging from a noose made of bed sheets attached to a water pipe in a bathroom. Young was sentenced Feb. 23, 1934, after pleading guilty. He testified he shot her when his offer of reconciliation was refused. He was committed to the prison psychiatric hospital several years ago.

$35,000 DROP DUE IN BARRACKS SCHOOL REVENUE

Operating revenue available for the Jefferson Barracks school district this year is expected to decline about $35,000 from the level last year as a result of a decrease in enrollment, officials of the district said today.

Walter Kreyling, treasurer of the board of education of the district, said the decrease may result in an operating deficit of about $14,000 for the fiscal year ending next June 30. The deficit will be met from an accumulated cash balance of about $90,000 that was on hand last July 1.

Estimates for Year.

Expenditures for the current year are estimated to range from $97,000 to $100,000, W. P. Sullivan, superintendent of the district, said. Revenue exclusive of a payment in lieu of taxes from the St. Louis County Housing Authority is estimated at $70,943.

The Housing Authority last year paid the district $15,000 in lieu of taxes. The payment is based on 10 per cent of the net shelter rental for the housing project now operated at Jefferson Barracks by the agency. The amount of this year's payment has not been set yet, Kreyling said.

The big decline in revenue results from a drop in funds expected to be received by the district under the state school foundation program. Only about $32,606 is expected from this source this year, compared with about $64,911 last year.

Sullivan explained that the state aid is based on average daily attendance. Last year's average, which will be used in computing the amount of this year's assistance, was 253 pupils, compared with 570 the previous year.

Reason for Decline.

This decline in enrollment resulted principally from a decrease in size of the present housing project at Jefferson Barracks. A number of buildings were razed to make way for the controversial new $3,025,825 project being erected by the Housing Authority.

Kreyling said the drop in revenue, coupled with continued expected increases in costs, could reduce the cash balance on hand now to a dangerously low level within several years.

Kreyling said the problem is complicated by the fact that more than two-thirds of the public school pupils in the district live in the housing project, which provides only a relatively small share of operating revenues.

Kreyling said despite this condition, he favors construction of the new housing project. He said he felt financial problems could be solved through co-operative efforts of the district, nearby school districts, the Housing Authority and county government.

Sullivan said he saw no alternative to solution of the district's problems except "consolidation into larger districts." A plan for consolidating the Jefferson Barracks and Hancock Place school districts was proposed by the county Board of Education last year. No action has been taken on the plan, which met opposition in the Hancock Place district.

Members of the Jefferson Barracks school board have been split in their views on the housing project. Paul Heath, president of the board, and Mrs. Marianne Nothum, vice president, have expressed opposition to it on the ground that it would aggravate educational conditions.

RULING DELAYS HEARING AGAINST 76 POWER FIRMS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —An examiner's ruling blocked an attempt yesterday by 76 private power companies to justify as an operating expense the cost of advertisements attacking public power as unfair competition.

Examiner Edward B. Marsh agreed, however, to submit his ruling to the full Federal Power Commission for a final decision.

POLICE SEEK 70 MORE DOGS TO FIGHT CRIME IN LONDON

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio Copyright, 1959.

LONDON, Jan. 7—London's metropolitan police has appealed for 70 police dogs to help fight the city's growing crime wave.

Although murders in Greater London dropped from 29 in 1957 to 26 in 1958, most other crimes were far more numerous. There were 40,000 cases of theft and burglary, 40 per cent above 1957, and 30,000 more than in 1948 when London was having its latest post-war crime wave.

Gasoline Quality Rises.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —The quality of automobile gasoline continues to improve, the Interior Department said yesterday. The national averages of octane ratings for regular, premium and super grade gasolines reached record highs last summer, the Bureau of Mines said. The bureau conducts two surveys yearly.

4 YEARS IN SENATE FOR GRUENING AND 2 FOR BARTLETT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UPI) —Senator Ernest Gruening of Alaska will serve four years in the Senate and his colleague, E. L. (Bob) Bartlett, will serve two years, a drawing determined today.

The two Democrats from the nation's newest state settled the length of their terms in a drawing before the full Senate shortly after they were sworn in.

Gruening drew first and pulled a slip from a small, mandolin-shaped box. The slip bore the number 3, which meant he will be a class III Senator with a four-year term. Bartlett picked out a slip that bore the number 2, which means he will be a class II Senator with a two-year term.

A third slip in the box bore number 1, which means Class 1 Senator. This would have meant a six-year term had it been drawn by either of the new Senators. The drawing means that Alaska will have a senatorial election in 1960 and again in 1962.

The results of the drawing meant that although Gruening lost a flip of the coin yesterday and was designated the new state's junior Senator, his first term in the Senate will be longer than Bartlett's.

FIRE CAUSES $3000 LOSS AT UPHOLSTERING STORE

A fire last nigth caused $3000 damage to the J. and R. Upholstering and Home Furnishing Co., 3641 Morganford road. Firemen fought the blaze for an hour and a half.

Deputy Chief James Sauerwein said the fire started on the first floor of the two-story brick structure when gas from the furnace ignited cotton dust on the floor. He estimated damage at $2000 to contents, and $1000 to the building. A clerk, Vincent Alvarez, was working in the store at the time, and turned in the alarm.

Pvt. Frank Wililams, of Engine Company 36, was knocked down when a hire hose burst. He was taken to City Hospital, but returned to duty without treatment.

PARKING METER SUIT TESTIMONY ENDED

Testimony in the suit by the Automobile Club of Missouri to invalidate ordinances transferring parking meter funds to general revenue and increasing parking fees and fines was concluded yesterday.

Final witness for the city was Alvin Acton, a city traffic engineer, who testified the increase in parking meter rates had discouraged all-day parkers, who kept their spaces by feeding nickels to the meter.

Acton's testimony was intended to show that the increase in rates was not a revenue measure, as the Automobile Club contended, but was a means of regulating parking. The witness said that when the cost of all-day meter parking went up from 45 to 90 cents, the all-day parkers moved to parking lots and made more curb space available for transient parkers.

Filing of Briefs.

Circuit Judge Franklin E. Reagan, who is hearing the case with a jury, accepted briefs filed by counsel for the Automobile Club and gave the city 30 days in which to file reply briefs. Thereafter, the Club's counsel will have another five days in which to answer the city briefs.

In other testimony, Acting Traffic Commissioner Ellis C. Henry Jr., said $100,000 in parking meter funds, out of an approximation of $300,000, is being spent currently for traffic improvements. It is the city's contention that such funds are expendable for phases of traffic control other than parking. The club insists they must be used only for installing and maintaining the meters.

Improvements now in progress, Henry testified, include installation of 1000 new street name signs and 22 electric signals and changing signals at 61 intersections to permit left turns.

Improvements for 1959.

Improvements planned for 1959, not all of them to be financed from parking meter funds, include hiring of three or four more traffic engineers, a two-way radio system for traffic division automobiles, installation of overhead traffic signals on Gravois, removal of the remaining center pilings on Gravois and establishment of additional reversible-lane streets on major traffic arteries, Henry said.

Another city witness, Arthur C. Meyers Jr., police department statistician, testified operation of the police traffic division in 1958 cost $966,284, of which $175,975 went for operation of tri-cars, used by traffic policemen in enforcing parking meter ordinances.

PUPILS SEND DIME TO ROCKEFELLER; IT BOUNCES BACK

COMMACK, N.Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller appreciated the gesture—but he still is not accepting any gifts. Not even a good will dime from the student council at Smith's Lane school.

The seventh and eighth grade youngsters in the school council wrote Rockefeller after his election:

"We know . . . your grandfather gave dimes to the populace as a token of friendship and, to show our esteem for you, our new governor-elect, we are sending you the same token of friendship" . . .

In a reply received by the youngsters yesterday, a gubernatorial assistant thanked the council for its good wishes but explained that the governor has a rule that neither he nor anyone in his administration may accept a gift even as a friendly gesture. The student council dime was taped onto the letter.

MAN GOES BACK INTO FIRE TO SAVE 5 CHILDREN; ALL DIE

BRANDON, Minn., Jan. 7 (AP)—A father and his five children died in a fire that swept their two-story home here early today.

Mark Kelly got out of the house after the fire began, but lost his life when he went back in and sought to rescue his children.

Dead were Kelly, 38 years old; three sons, Jim, 16, Dennis, about 12, Pat, about 14, and two daughters, Mary Lee, about 10, and Peggy, 3.

Mrs. Kelly fled from the house with her husband, neighbors restrained her from reentering.

TWO AMERICANS CLIMB MOUNTAIN IN ANTARCTIC

McMURDO SOUND, Antarctica, Jan. 7 (AP)—A sailor and a scientist battled freezing weather yesterday to reach the top of 13,200-foot Mount Erebus, highest point ever reached by American climbers in Antarctica.

Seaman Hudson Holloway, 23 years old, of Odessa, Fla., and Hugh Anderson, 26, of Altadena, Calif., a cosmic ray researcher, reached the summit of the volcanic mountain about 81 hours after they started out from sea level. They walked about 22 miles.

Earlier this week three New Zealanders scaled the peak, the first time this had been accomplished since 1912.

TWO GO ON HUNGER STRIKE

SWAFFHAM, England, Jan. 7 (AP)—Two pacificists, jailed for invading a base for American rockets, went on a hunger strike yesterday.

They were among a group of demonstrators who staged a protest march at a new missile site near here before Christmas. They were given 14-day sentences on charges of obstructing the law after clashing with police.

$128 for Returning $16,700.

TOKYO, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Automobile salesman Tamotsu Aoyagi left $16,700 in a taxi cab yesterday. The driver, Kinsaburo Miyajima, returned it and Aoyagi offered him a $1670 reward. Miyajima refused to accept it but took $128 as a "gift."

TEAMSTERS PLAN BIG DRIVE AT SEARS

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—Organizing of 70,000 employes of Sears Roebuck and Co. is the Teamsters Union's "biggest project" at the moment, Harold Gibbons of St. Louis, executive assistant to Teamster President James Hoffa, said at a meeting of 100 members of the union's Sears Roebuck committee yesterday.

The committee is spearheading a drive to unionize warehousemen, clerks and drivers of the big mail order house.

Many drivers who deliver Sears products already are members of the Teamsters, Gibbons said, since trucking concerns which haul for Sears have contracts with the union.

Sam Baron, executive secretary of the union's national Sears committee, said the drive would concentrate at the start on mail order operations and warehouse workers but the union would look eventually toward signing up employes in Sears retail outlets.

John Greeley, chairman of the union's eastern conference warehouse division, said the committee had tentatively set Jan. 26 as the "kickoff" date for the actual organizing drive.

New York Police Group Charges Unfair Labor Policies.

© New York Times News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association filed a complaint with the city labor department yesterday, charging Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy with "totalitarian and uninformed opposition to a grievance procedure."

The association asserted that Kennedy's labor policies were making policemen more receptive to "outside unions" by denying them any means of hearing their grievances. An effort to unionize policemen was abandoned last week by a Teamster union local.

The complaint petitioned Harold A. Felix, city labor commissioner, to set up grievance machinery within the police department under Mayor Wagner's Executive Order 49 that accorded most city employes many of the union rights enjoyed by workers in private industry.

TO HEAD AD DEPARTMENT

Joseph T. Donovan, assistant manager of the outdoor department advertising operations of D'Arcy Advertising Co. for the last three years, has been appointed manager of the department, it was announced today.

Donovan, who joined the outdoor staff of the agency in 1948, succeeds Charles A. Horn, vice president and outdoor manager, who resigned last Thursday after 36 years with the firm. Robert E. Flood, who has handled posting for major clients of the advertising agency, will be Donovan's assistant.

JAYCEES TO CITE ONE WHO CANNOT ATTEND

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 7 (AP) —The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, which removed concert pianist Van Cliburn from its 10 outstanding young men list because he could not attend the awards banquet, yesterday approved an award for another man who will not attend.

Jaycees said it did not mean a "special concession" for Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, Harvard University political scientists visiting Berlin as guest of the West German Government.

Cliburn, who last year gained international fame by winning competition among concert artists in Moscow, was taken off the top 10 list of outstanding young men of 1958 because of what Jaycees called "a policy matter." He had a scheduled concert at Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 17, the same date the awards banquet will be held at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Singer Pat Boone was selected to replace Cliburn.

Jaycees said their policy regarding personal appearance of winners requires that, "barring extreme circumstances," they will attend the awards presentation.

Jaycees said Dr. Kissinger was invited abroad by West German Foreign Minister Henrich von Brentano 'in advance of his notification of winning the award."

"Dr. Kissinger's vital role in formulating American political thought left him no choice but to accept the West German invitation at this time," Jaycee president Robert V. Cox said.

Dr. Kissinger told the Jaycees, "I deeply regret not being able to attend the awards ceremony in person. The award means very much to me, and nothing but the importance of demonstrating American support and concern for Germany and Berlin at this particular time could possibly keep me from attending."

Three medical doctors and the navigator of the Nautilus are among the Jaycee's 10 outstanding young men of 1958. The awards go to men under the age of 36.

Besides Boone and Kissinger, other recipients are:

Lt. Shepherd M. Jenks, 31 years old, navigator of the Nautilus; Donald A. Glaser, 32, professor of physics at the University of Michigan; James T. Grace Jr., M.D., 35, Buffalo, N.Y.; Warren H. Phillips, 32, managing editor of the Wall Street Journal; Loren Edward Schnack, 32, county and probate judge of Adams county, Ill.

Richard T. Smith M.D., 34, University of Florida; Dr. Gus Turbeville, 35, president of Northland College, Washland, Wis., and Hugh Edwards Wilson III M.D., 34, University of Texas southwestern medical school.

TWO FELLED BY GAS FUMES

Mrs. Willard Gardner and her 14-year-old daughter, Helen Medley, were taken to City Hospital suffering from inhalation of gas fumes early today after police were called to the Gardner home at 1031A Morrison avenue.

The fumes apparently came from a gas heater in the living room, attached to a flue that had been blocked with soot, police said. Mrs. Gardner, 53, apparently got up to investigate and collapsed. Her husband and a son, Richard Medley, 15, were not injured.

U.S. BOOKLET SAYS RUSSIA AIDED HITLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UPI) —The United States today charged Russia with trying to rewrite history to hide the fact that the Soviet Union encouraged Hitler's military ambitions and cleared the way for the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

It renewed charges that Russia is responsible for the continued division of Germany, the crisis in Berlin and the trouble and insecurity which has plagued Europe ever since the end of World War II.

The United States charges were contained in a 53-page booklet released by the State Department to refute allegations in Premier Khrushchev's Nov. 27 note to the Western Big Three demanding that they evacuate West Berlin.

The Russian note, which the Allies have rejected, contained a series of assertions that the United States and its allies had at one time encouraged Hitler and then refused after the war to co-operate with Russia to achieve European security and prosperity.

Today's publication, described as "an analysis" of the Soviet note, took up the Russian charges one-by-one and knocked them down by citing history and the statements of Russian leaders.

The United States said the Soviet Union, during the time that Hitler was in power, "not only maintained normal diplomatic and economic relations with Germany but also assisted in building up a new German war machine."

It said that "in April 1941, the U.S.S.R. signed a neutrality pact with the Japanese ally of Hitler, thereby clearing the way for the Pearl Harbor attack on the United States on Dec. 7, 1941."

Moscow co-operated with the Western allies during the war when it was getting vast military aid but beginning in 1946 the Soviet launched the "cold war" and proceeded to violate all its wartime agreements, the booklet asserted.

STRATTON SEEKS BAR ON PERSONAL PROPERTY TAXES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 7 (AP)—Gov. William G. Stratton today urged the new Illinois Legislature to increase state school aid, abolish personal property taxes and reorganize the 15 code departments under his jurisdiction.

In a message to a joint session, he hinted that tax increases were in the offing because of the mounting demands on the state treasury for schools and public aid programs.

In this connection, Stratton advised the Legislature to consider earmarking "certain revenue sources for future support of the two huge grant programs which chiefly account for the tremendous rise in state costs."

Taxes for a Purpose.

"In other words," he said, "if people are going to expect the state to provide huge increases to support the elementary schools and the several relief programs then they had better be taxed specifically for these purposes."

In that way, the Governor continued, the money would be available and "the public will have a much better concept of what they are paying for."

Emphasizing the problems confronting the General Assembly in the next six months, Stratton declared:

"This Legislature must find more for schools, more for the care of the needy, more for the care of the mentally ill; more, indeed, must be provided in every field which comes under the broad heading of health, welfare and safety."

Level Must Go Up.

On school aid, he said the time had arrived to raise the present $200 per pupil level of support for grade and high schools, which would mean a sizable increase in the state's outlay.

He withheld a specific recommendation on the figure until he presents his two-year budget in April. The Illinois School Problems Commission has recommended the pupil level be boosted as high as $260. This would require $345,000,000 compared with the current $227,000,000 appropriation. State aid to schools makes up the difference between the guaranteed level and the amount produced by a local qualifying property tax.

Stratton urged the Legislature to take "bold statutory action" to eliminate the present "inequitable" personal property tax, long a sore spot in the Illinois tax system.

May Require Amendment.

However, some legal experts contend this cannot be done through a legislative act but requires a state constitutional amendment.

Stratton recommended as the "basic need" of the tax system a complete overhauling of the constitution's revenue article. The last two times such an amendment was submitted to voters it was rejected.

In one of the lengthiest messages presented by an Illinois Governor, Stratton also called for:

1. Construction of a state retarded children's school in Southern Illinois, comparable to those at Lincoln, Dixon and Chicago.
2. Construction of a minimum security penal institution, costing $1,000,000, which could house prisoners from Joliet, Menard and Pontiac after they were screened for rehabilitation work in vegetable and dairy farming.
3. An emergency appropriation of $52,200,000 in state and federal funds to carry the public aid programs through the current budget period ending June 30.
4. Necessary action to start construction of a new University of Illinois campus in Chicago to replace the Navy Pier branch.
5. Resubmission to a 1960 referendum of the state bond issue for educational and mental hosptial buildings which was turned down in the November election. Stratton said it should be presented as separate issues and the amount determined when the budget is ready.
6. Improvements in the court system that are possible through legislative action. Although Stratton mentioned nothing specifically on this point, the Illinois Bar Association has recommended that justices of the peace and magistrates be placed on salaries instead of the present fee basis.
7. A reappraisal of the state school aid formula with the possibility that the "whole concept of state aid may have to be altered."
8. Tightening up of aid-to-dependent-children rules to eliminate evasion of obligations by "irresponsible fathers" and stricter rules on responsibility of children to care for their aged parents.
9. Continuation of the state scholarship program, started two years ago, with an additfonal appropriation of $2,400,000.
10. Approval of legislation allowing Chicago voters to decide on a $50,900,000 school building bond issue.

Code Department Change.

Stratton labelled as his "most far reaching recommendation" the first sweeping reorganization of the Code Department structure under the governor since it was set up in 1917.

He said it would mean improved operation, elimination of overlapping and obsolete functions, and reduction of costs.

In addition, the governor said it would prevent "the federal government from usurping further governmental functions by default in those areas where these functions would more efficiently be locally administered."

His reorganization plan called for three new departments—Transportation, Natural Resources, and Labor and Industry.

Eliminated through mergers with other departments would be Aeronautics, Public Works and Buildings, Conservation, Labor, Mines and Minerals, Personnel, and Registration and Education.

Unchanged or receiving additional functions would be Agriculture, Finance, Financial Institutions, Insurance, Health, Public Safety, Welfare and Revenue.

BRITISH WEEKLY SAYS KHRUSHCHEV IS IN TROUBLE

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1959.

LONDON, Jan. 7—Kenneth de Courcy, British news letter editor who forecast Russia's first A-bomb explosion, says that Nikita S. Khrushchev is in trouble.

"The information received by this service from some of the best sources in the Soviet Union suggests that the possibility of a military-political clash in the fairly near future cannot be excluded," says his weekly, Intelligence Digest. Marshal Konev and other military leaders "are worried about Berlin," it says.

"Khrushchev, for his part, is not in the position of strength that his words and actions suggest," it adds. "He is not the master. He is, in fact, badly rattled and jumpy."

The Intelligence Digest does not explain how it made contact with "some of the best sources in the Soviet Union."

GRANITE CITY MAN'S DEATH LAID TO INHALING SEWER GAS

Haskell B. Watts, an employe of the Granite City street department for 27 years, died yesterday, apparently from the effects of inhaling sewer gas while working in a manhole.

Watts, 65 years old, was a member of a crew attempting to open a clogged sanitary sewer under St. Clair avenue between Myrtle and Buxton avenues. A blower had been used to ventilate the manhole but the blower hose became stuck at the bottom of the 20-foot-deep opening, and Watts went down to disengage it.

As he returned to a point near the surface, fellow workers said he appeared to be ill. They reached for his hands, but were unable to hold him. He fell backward to the bottom. A fireman equipped with a mask entered the manhole, fastened a rope to Watts' body and he was pulled to the surface. He was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Elizabeth Hospital. He lived at 2504 Adams street, Granite City.

FRANKFURTER RECOVERS FROM MILD HEART ATTACK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter has made a good recovery from his recent mild heart attack and expects to be back on the bench next Monday, his office said today.

Justice Frankfurter was in the hospital almost six weeks. He returned home last Saturday. He is getting back into court routine by reading the cases coming up for argument next week.

Slide Takes Home Into Sea.

OSLO, Jan. 7 (UPI) — An avalanche at Kjoellefjord, Norway, swept a hillside home into the sea. A 60-year-old man, his daughter and her two infant children were carried away with the house and killed.

JOHNSON OFFERS COMPROMISE IN FILIBUSTER FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas introduced a compromise proposal today into the impending Senate fight on curbing of filibusters.

He made his move shortly after Vice President Richard M. Nixon told the Senate it had the right to adopt new rules by majority vote.

Johnson's plan would permit the shutting off of debate by a vote of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting. The present rule requires a vote by two-thirds of the full Senate membership—or 66 votes —to halt debate.

The compromise was offered with powerful partisan backing before spokesmen for a bloc of Northern and Western Democrats could sumbit their proposal for liberalization of the anti-filibuster rule.

Anderson's Plan.

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, spokesman for the Northern-Western bloc, had planned a motion simply to provide that the Senate consider changes in its rules.

Either motion involves long debate.

A spirited scrap developed immediately with the Northern-Western group seeking to introduce its proposal.

Johnson forced a halt to the squabble by a motion to adjourn—a motion which may not be debated.

The Senate supported his adjournment motion 73 to 23, putting off further debate on the rules change until tomorrow.

Senators working for a rules change are split on what they favor. Some of them, including Paul H. Douglas (Dem.), Illinois, want a rule which would permit a majority of the full membership — 50 votes — to close debate after 15 days.

These Senators contend that Johnson's plan is not much improvement, if any, over the present rule. They argue it would be about as hard to get a debate-stopping vote of two-thirds of those present as to get approval by two-thirds of the entire membership.

Johnson Supporters.

Backing the Johnson compromise were Senators Carl Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, president pro tem, and chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee; Mike Mansfield (Dem.), Montana, the Democratic whip; Everett M. Dirksen (Rep.), Illinois, the newly-elected Republican leader; Styles Bridges (Rep.), New Hampshire, chairman of the Republican Senate Policy Committee, and Leverett Saltonstall (Rep.), Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Republican conference.

Nixon's advisory ruling that the Senate has the right to change its rules at the beginning of a session by majority vote was given in response to an inquiry by Senator Jacob K. Javits (Rep.), New York. The Vice President said his opinion was unchanged from that he had expressed when the last Congress convened.

His opinion is challenged by Southerners and some other Senators who oppose any change in the old rules.

Javits opened the way for the Nixon statement immediately after the swearing in of the new Senators.

Johnson had said he hoped any rules fight would be put off until tomorrow. He asked for unanimous consent of the Senators to a meeting tomorrow at 10 a.m., two hours earlier than the usual convening time.

Before Johnson's request could be acted upon Javits demanded to know under what rules the Senate was acting. He was assured by both Nixon and Johnson that proponents of a rules change would not waive the privilege of seeking a change by agreeing to Johnson's motion.

The permission for the 10 a.m. session tomorrow then was granted.

Johnson explained he did not want a lengthy Senate session today because many of the new Senators had celebrations planned with constituents in town to honor them.

CALLS FOR EXUBERANCE IN ADVERTISING FIELD

Advertising today calls for exuberance, daring and purpose, Jules Dundes, a vice president of Columbia Broadcasting System in New York, said here yesterday.

He was the principal speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of St. Louis at Hotel Statler Hilton. Dundes is in charge of administration for seven radio stations owned and operated by CBS.

Discussing radio as a medium for advertising, Dundes noted there are 129,000,000 radios in this country owned by 48,000,000 families. Investigation has shown that 96 per cent of those who own radios listen to them regularly, Dundes said.

Congo Riots Quickly Transform Seemingly Amiable Relationship Into a Complete Estrangement

Utter Breakdown of Confidence and Communications Most Disconcerting Aspect of Uprising — Fear of Increasing Police Control.

Second of a series of articles by Donald Grant of the Post-Dispatch staff on political and economic conditions in Africa. The series will present the status of the peoples struggling toward self-determination and the progress in the East-West rivalry to orient the emerging nationalist groups toward democracy or Communism.

By DONALD GRANT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LEOPOLDVILLE, Belgian Congo, Jan. 7.

WHAT BEGAN SUNDAY as a riot outside the Y.M.C.A. building in the African section of Leopoldville, has now become a general breakdown of the normal processes of life in this colony. The full extent of the losses in lives and property probably will not be revealed for some time.

The physical destruction smashed cars and looted shops —though considerable, is by no means the worst result. The dead and wounded are still being counted.

I have counted 17 wounded in hospitals for Europeans and 30 wounded in hospitals for Africans and have reports on at least 50 African dead. In the absence of any official information, such a personal check is the only way to arrive at a casualty figure, though it may represent no more than a fraction of the total.

Relationship Changes.

The most disconcerting aspect of the rioting, however, is the utter breakdown of confidence and communication between the European minority and the African majority of the people here. Before one's eyes, a relationship which many observers had believed to be the best on the African continent, changed to something cruel and ugly.

Talking to the African wounded and to their women and children who milled about in the hospital courtyard was a moving experience. What they said—simple tales of confusion, shooting by Belgian officers and a sting of pain—was less impressive than how they said it.

There was a look of bewilderment in their dark eyes and of pain, but the complete estrangement between human beings occurring in the space of a few hours is the most tragic of all to see.

Expressions of Hatred.

As for the Belgians, many feel as if their life foundations have been removed here and they have nowhere else to go. Coupled with this is a bitterness giving rise to expressions of hatred.

For hours after dawn yesterday there was panic buying in the shops. By afternoon most shops had closed. Many African workers were absent from their jobs and service in the hotels and restaurants all but stopped.

Soldiers surrounding the "native quarter"—a misleading term, since most of the people here are Africans—kept traffic between the European sections of the city and African sections at a minimum. Some Africans were allowed to come and go however, otherwise it is difficult to see how the city could exist.

Patrols were sent inside the African areas. Many Africans were beaten, others were shot in an effort to force the Africans to submit once more to Belgian authority.

River Traffic Halted.

Trains stopped running into Leopoldville and the ferry across the Congo river to Brazzaville, in French Equatorial Africa, was halted by Belgian government orders. Normally, several thousand Africans from Brazzaville come to Leopoldville daily to work. The Belgian authorities here are particularly suspicious of the "radical" tendencies of these workers.

At the barbed-wire barriers on the roads leading to the African sections of Leopoldville, soldiers were stationed—African troops with Belgian officers and noncommissioned officers. Troops also were stationed at key points throughout the European city.

Under existing circumstances in Leopoldville, it seems clear to experienced observers here that the picture that had been built up by Belgian authorities —and accepted widely in the rest of the world—of the Belgian Congo as an Eden in Africa was little more than an illusion.

Reassessment Begun.

A reassessment of the relationship between the Congo and its parent government in Brussels no doubt is under way. At least a beginning is being made by informed European diplomats here to draw some conclusions for Africa generally.

The economic importance of the Congo to Belgium is great. The Congo has some of the world's richest copper deposits and produces 75 per cent of the world's industrial diamonds. It is a prime source of uranium for the United States. It has the largest hydroelectric potential in the world, though it is still largely undeveloped.

Belgian investments in the Congo have been great and profitable. In recent months, however, there has been a depression in the Congo and its effects have been felt the sharpest in Leopoldville, the central city.

Copper Prices Down.

American purchases of copper have slacked off and world copper prices have fallen. In Leopoldville alone, it is estimated, there are some 20,000 unemployed out of a total African work force of less than 100,000.

Even before the present disorders there had been some loss of confidence in the Congo by Belgian investors. Despite all this, the Congo represents great wealth for Belgium and has perhaps been the world's most successful example of colonialism in economic terms.

Politically, only a bare beginning had been made toward self government. A new policy for the Congo was to have been announced in Brussels on Jan. 13. Whether the announcement will be postponed is not known here. Some observers fear that Brussels will react to the disorders by increasing police control and slowing or halting the pace of political development.

Two Possible Patterns.

In any event, there is something to be said for the view that the Belgians have fallen between two possible patterns for African colonialism. They have been less harsh and unyielding toward the African people than the Union of South Africa, but they have been much slower than the British in West Africa to lead the Africans to any form of democratic independence.

It is not clear whether the Union of South Africa will be able to maintain its harsh regime indefinitely. Yet having decided to attempt to maintain such regime, the South Africans have at least been consistent. The Belgians, on the other hand, partly in response to liberal opinion in the home country, have wavered.

Their paternalistic social services and wages policies have given the Africans a taste of a better life than primitive Africa knew. Recently they have even begun giving some higher educational opportunities to Africans and for years have made rudimentary education available.

Pressures Built Up.

As they continued to deny the Africans a chance to run their own affairs, as the Africans at the same time became increasingly better able to do so, the result was to build up political pressures. Whether outside forces inspired by Communists added to these forces is not clear.

It is the official Belgian view that Communism is a negligible or non-existent force here. Some diplomatic sources question this view and add that there is some evidence of Communist influence among some of the Belgians here themselves.

All African problems seem to be highly complex ones. No doubt the present disorders in Leopoldville will pass. There are some signs even today that a return to normalcy is not far off.

Ice Age Riddle Still Unsolved After Glacier Study in IGY

THIRD OF A SERIES

NEW YORK.

TWO MONTHS AGO 20 Americans, encamped on an ice floe drifting through winter darkness near the North Pole, were startled by the unlikely sound of an approaching express train. It ran right through their camp.

They hurried out of their clustered building with flashlights and hunted until they found a hairline crack in the ice. It was evident that their home was doomed.

A few weeks later, on Dec. 21, 30 Russians, similarly camped even nearer the Pole, found their community split in two.

These two groups of men had placed themselves in jeopardy to carry out some of the more dramatic research of the recently concluded International Geophysical Year. One of its fields of research was glaciology and other phenomena in the polar regions.

Scientists engaged in this program were at the opposite end of the world, at the South Pole itself. They were on high mountain glaciers in Alaska and Siberia, having been carried there, with their supplies, by ski planes, by helicopters, by reindeer or by horses. A number of the animals had been lost in mountain torrents or down glacier crevasses.

Riddle of Ice Ages.

It was hoped that the combined efforts of these men would help solve the riddle of the ice ages. What causes them? Is a new one on us? Will the Arctic ocean soon be free of ice?

Of the 4000 stations and observatories of the I.G.Y., all but four were relatively stationary, though some on glacier ice crept a few feet each day. The four exceptions were the drifting stations on the Arctic ocean. Driven about by the whims of wind and current, they traveled as much as 4000 miles. Two of the stations were American and two were Soviet.

Repeatedly cracks threatened the floe camps with disaster. Sometimes they dismembered the air strips which were their only link to the outside world.

The perils which they faced were often unexpected. Polar bears prowled the camps even when they were hardly more than 100 miles from the North Pole. The chief problem was not the cold, but summer melting. This sometimes flooded entire camps and made it impossible for aircraft to land for months at a time.

The scientists studied not only the weather above, but also the bottom of the ice beneath their feet, donning aqualungs to swim under the floes.

At the opposite end of the world eight nations joined forces to probe the secrets of Antarctica. It was the greatest assault ever on that continent and was widely publicized. Last winter, what was summer in the Antarctic, parties with tractors or dog teams covered at least 14,000 miles of the ice sheet.

Extensive Operations.

The operations will also be extensive in the current southern summer. Preliminary reports on the results have been received from scientists in the field and from Philip Benjamin, New York Times correspondent with the expedition.

Benjamin cites increasing evidence that Antarctica is cut in two by a trough between the Ross and Weddell seas. The possibility of such an ice-filled link has long been post-

Can Dulles Slow Up to Save Health?

White House Concerned Because He Is Foreign Policy in Person.

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.

SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN FOSTER DULLES is having bad luck with his health, and since he comes as close as possible to being the foreign policy of the United States, the Administration naturally is concerned.

The facts are not as alarming as some reports circulating in the capital imply. He contracted a virus infection shortly after noon on Sunday. This was the immediate reason for canceling his trip to Ottawa.

More important, he has not recovered completely from the after-effects of an attack of diverticulitis, inflammation of the colon, despite a two-week holiday in Jamaica. This attack put him in Walter Reed Hospital last month.

There is, however, no recurrence of the cancer that necessitated a major operation two years ago. Both his brother, Allen Dulles, head of the Central Intelligence Agency, and his sister, Eleanore Dulles, head of the Berlin desk at the State Department, have been assured on this point.

18 Hours a Day.

Nevertheless, he is troubled that he has not been able to work 18 hours a day at his job recently, and while this may not be a reasonable expectation in a man of 70, it is a problem because he has organized the State Department in such a way that he almost has to work 18 hours a day to make his particular system work.

He is not only the principal adviser to the President on foreign affairs, but the chief foreign policy negotiator, speech writer, and witness on Capitol Hill. If his doctors had had their way, he would not have agreed to go to Paris for the North Atlantic Treaty

U.S. Does Not Have Rockets To Match Soviet Space Feat

By Brig. Gen. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.

THE SOVIET feat of sending a payload of 796.5 pounds and a container weighing 3245.2 pounds past the moon and into orbit around the sun inevitably will cause demands by Congress that the National Aeronautics and Space Agency do something at least equally significant.

The fact is that the United States does not have the rocket hardware to enable it to match, much less to exceed, the Soviet accomplishment.

The United States will, of course, attempt to do the same thing, and to reach Venus, but with relatively small payloads. Because reliable hardware is not available for even a smaller but similar probe, many more failures than successes can be expected and even those successes will be much less dramatic than Russia's first ones.

Dr. T. Keith Glennan, administrator of NASA, in an address in Washington Dec. 17, said: "There is need to lay out a long-range program calling for the acquisition of basic scientific information and the development of the technology necessary to this mission. . . . The important matter here is that orderly programs in these basic areas be planned, scheduled and undertaken."

Programs of a Sort.

The Advanced Project Research Agency of the Defense Department, the Army and the Air Force all have had programs of a sort, but these have not been orderly, studied and long-range, and most important, officially supported on a continuing basis.

Dr. Wernher von Braun, of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, is probably the only individual who has had both the vision and the knowledge to have in his own mind the kind of program Glennan was talking about. But the Army has just about been pushed out of the space and long-range rocket business.

Without a long-range program, United States efforts will continue to be reactions to Soviet accomplishments. In effect, the Russians will be determining what the United States program will be.

The point of next importance is the development of rockets that will provide the propulsion for large payloads — large enough to be fully instrumented —into orbit and beyond the earth's gravity.

Glennan said also that he had taken the "initial steps looking to a family of boosters that should satisfy the nation's requirements for the next five years." This does not sound like much of an accomplishment, but these actions are the essential foundation for a successful space and satellite program.

Only One Large Booster.

The United States has only one large rocket booster, that developed by North American Aviation Co., to give the initial boost to the Navaho pilotless bomber. It had a thrust of about 135,000 pounds. This has been increased by refinements today to about 150,000 pounds.

This rocket engine is used to power the Jupiter and Thor intermediate range ballistic missiles. Two of them, together with a 90,000 pound thrust "sustainer" rocket, are clustered inside the Atlas intercontinental missile, giving a total thrust for the Atlas of 360,000 to 400,000 pounds.

These ballistic missile programs, like the space programs, were started on a crash basis in reaction to Soviet progress in missile development. They made use of the only large rocket in existence in the United States. There was no time to develop other more suitable large rockets.

Because they are underpowered, the American missiles can carry warheads of only one-third to one-fifth the explosive force of Soviet missiles.

The Soviet T-1 missile, with 78,000 pounds thrust, has a

RED CHINA SAYS LABOR REMOLDED INTELLECTUALS

TOKYO, Jan. 7 (UPI)—The Communist Peiping Radio said today manual labor has "remolded the ideology and heightened the political consciousness" of 44,000 Chinese intellectuals and white-collar workers who were packed off to farms and factories in the provinces a year ago.

A Peiping broadcast said the intellectuals—some of whom have returned to Peiping—helped to set up 200 schools and 80 health centers in their spare time.

"The functionaries and other intellectuals learned the likes, dislikes and most urgent needs of the laboring people," the broadcast said. "A deep-rooted feeling sprang up between them and the laboring people. . . . These things brought a change in the thinking and feeling of the intellectuals."

Mike Rice's Life and Death

Since I have been associated with 16 and 17-year-olds for many years in my capacity as a teacher, I am genuinely shocked and concerned by the death of Mike Rice in St. Louis recently.

Granted that the lad made the error of stealing a car, must a policeman shoot to kill? Why in a case like this, if he must shoot at all, could he not wound the running person in the leg?

To my knowledge this boy had been carefully reared, was active in Sunday school and church circles and had been in no difficulties of any kind.

Only he could speak to explain the motivation for his fatal error, but death from a policeman's bullet has denied him the right of being heard, and plunged his family into abysmal grief.

Many teen-agers are guilty of errors in judgment; in fact most adults tag them "irresponsible." Given a chance to live, however, they develop into decent citizens. Sudden death, such as Mike Rice met, is termed "excusable homicide." I challenge this.

So long as we are learning the use of dogs from the police of Great Britain, might we not investigate as well whether their policemen are armed or not, and whether they shoot to kill a frightened 16-year-old running away from the law in broad daylight? Teacher

Four Years Are Plenty

A few weeks ago President Eisenhower expressed the view that two more years should be added to the four years of high school. His reason was that the children were not getting enough education out of their four years of high school. He feels they are not prepared for the business world or college with only this small background.

What he says is true in a sense but I believe that adding two more years will also add years to the time before they reach self-reliance and independence. If a person knows he is going to college or into business, he will take his studies seriously anyway. A doctor and a lawyer are good examples of this situation.

Beyond Buz Sawyer

In a recent letter in this column, a reader who identified himself as "Unbrainwashed" took to task the comic strip Buz Sawyer.

"Unbrainwashed" should be reminded that he enjoys a wonderful privilege—he is not forced or coerced to read Buz Sawyer; he is free to exercise an unlimited choice of reading matter from numerous sources and if he so desires he can express his opinion on what he has read without fear of reprisal.

If "Unbrainwashed" would care to sample a different medium of entertainment, and get a view completely out of phase with Buz Sawyer, may I suggest that he view a Communist-produced motion picture?

In a recent Communist presentation we saw American soldiers portrayed as unclean, unshaven, sloppily attired, leering, cruel, oafish brutes. The favorite and regular pastime of these specimens was beating, kicking, and otherwise abusing Negro soldiers.

In the story, however, the Negro soldiers are rescued from their tormentors by a group of handsome, smiling Russian soldiers attired in immaculate, expertly tailored uniforms.

This sort of thing can be pretty effective on a group of viewers who see only those movies selected for them by their Communist benefactors.

Our Job

It appears that Soviet achievements have developed out of Russia's recent rate of growth, while United States economy is definitely capable of more rapid growth than it has made in the past.

Isn't it about time to stop underestimating Soviet capabilities and overestimating our own achievements?

In order for the U.S. to maintain its position as a world leader, we will have to concentrate on improving our own total national abilities. Julia Adamson

The reason the Russians are ahead of us in the space age program is that they can afford to experiment while we cannot.

They buy at cost, while we pay twice as much to launch the same type of rocket.

Our experts are as smart as the Russians. What we need to do is to improve our free enterprise system so that it will provide as much wealth as the Russian government-owned system.

Two for the Agenda

Convening Missouri legislators have talked at length of the 1000 bills they expect to introduce, concerning such critical matters as finances and such uncritical ones as "cleaning up our school textbooks." They have talked little about two subjects which have in common a characteristic of seeming to be unmentionable.

These subjects are pay-as-you-go income taxes and billboard controls on interstate highways. Nobody has advanced a convincing reason for opposing them, but nobody in Jefferson City so far has proposed them.

In the next few months, the Legislature will consider many other important matters: a spring primary, to improve the elective process; a point-system driver's license to make our roads safer; better aid for the impoverished mental health program; criminal code reforms; and St. Louis area problems—the earnings tax, off-street parking and clearer authority for the Bi-state Agency.

But the two largest single issues facing the state involve its finances and its highways. Tax withholding and billboard controls are intimately connected with each.

Missouri is spending some 16 million dollars a year above its income. Gov. Blair proposes to add 24 millions to revenue by increasing some excise and franchise taxes. Tax withholding would add six or eight millions to the state's income simply by improving present tax collection. Is it logical for the state to raise taxes without attempting to collect present levies in full?

Critics of withholding have scattered their shots at every administrative problem and missed the main point: that 11 states already practicing this pay-as-you-go system have reduced tax evasion and increased their revenue. The revenue gains ranged from 9.6 to as much as 25 per cent.

Meanwhile the Highway Commission also seeks more money. It proposes a 2-cent increase in the state gasoline tax of 3 cents a gallon. The increase would support a 20-year program intended to give the state a highway system in which it could take pride. By controlling billboards on the interstate portion of the system, the state could improve the system even more and collect some money for doing it. Is it logical to spend billions on highways but to let them become eyesores?

Outdoor advertising interests will argue otherwise, but public highways are not built to be private advertising opportunities or billboard alleys. Recognizing this, the Federal Government offers a bonus of one half of 1 per cent to states which accept its standards for regulating billboards. That would mean some three million dollars for Missouri for doing what it ought to do anyway.

The questions about tax withholding and billboard controls would answer themselves if given serious and non-political consideration. Pay-as-you-go taxes and billboards should be on the Legislature's agenda.

Conflict to Be Avoided

A committee has been named to work out an acceptable location for the proposed downtown toll-free bridge and its approaches. We trust that the committee will succeed in averting any impairment of the riverfront national park, occupying land which for more than two decades has been reserved for the city's most thrilling embellishment, the 60-story arch and its surrounding park and buildings.

Since Eero Saarinen, the national memorial architect, and John Poland of the City Plan Commission are on the committee with Meyer Ableman, the highway department's urban area engineer, there should be assurance that no grab of the riverfront park area will be considered. As Mayor Tucker pointed out after the meeting in his office at which the committee was appointed, use of any of the land would have to be sanctioned by an act of Congress, and this could mean new delays and frustrations just when the Government is going ahead with the park.

A bridge in this vicinity, serving the traffic of the Third Street and Daniel Boone expressways, is a necessity. There already is agreement that its design should not conflict with that of the arch and other features of the park. So with the co-operation of the National Park Service and the Federal Bureau of Public Roads as well as that of the Highway Commission, the committee should be able o work out a solution which will neither delay nor mar either project.

Downtown to the circumference of metropolitan St. Louis in 13 minutes? What kind of a schedule is that—one for helicopters? Downtown to Ballas road by automobile in peak hour traffic takes at least 40 minutes. Even when the Daniel Boone Expressway is linked to the Red Feather and then extended all the way downtown, Ballas road still will be a long way west by car. What is this talk of a 13-minute trip from the riverfront? A dream?

Not necessarily. In San Francisco-Oakland, which is preparing to spend nearly a billion dollars to provide itself with the West Coast's first true rapid-transit system, mile-a-minute speeds (or better) are envisioned in streamlined electric trains. Every passenger would have a seat. In rush hours, trains would depart every 90 seconds. Huge parking lots would surround suburban stations for those who drove to their rail connection; bus service from the stations to residential areas also would be provided, with rail-bus transfers being used.

The Bay Area sees rapid transit as the lowest cost answer to its growing transportation problem. Compared to the estimated five billion dollar cost of building freeways to serve the needs of a growing population in that metropolitan area, a billion dollars for rapid transit is a bargain.

The San Francisco-Oakland Rapid Transit District, created by the 1958 California Legislature, is expected to have precise engineering and financial proposals ready for submission to the voters within two years. Solving the transportation problem is largely a matter of costly engineering and capital improvement of the proper kind. If the Bay Area residents are willing to pay the cost, they may be the first in the nation to free themselves of the strangulating effect of the automobile.

St. Louis has already taken the first step toward a similar objective. The $535,000 transit-traffic survey financed jointly by the city, the county and the state Highway Department will provide a blueprint for a rational attack on the transit problem. The survey has been under way since 1956. Its report is expected to be made public next month. The report won't produce any mile-a-minute transit schedules, but it may show how they can be achieved.

Bilateral or Otherwise

Judging by what has leaked out of the talks of Deputy Premier Mikoyan at the State Department, his visit to Washington may be one of the most important events of the cold war.

There is good reason to believe that Mikoyan came to this country, not on a social visit, and not just to urge greater trade, but to make a serious effort to get negotiations started on basic East-West issues. Marquis Childs reports that while Mikoyan is touring the country the State Department will be working out a carefully considered position on these issues to be presented to Mikoyan when he sees President Eisenhower. And even the gloomiest of diplomats, such as Under Secretary Robert Murphy, are beginning to feel that a major negotiation is now possible.

Mikoyan is said to be urging direct two-party negotiations between Russia and the United States, and we may expect to hear the familiar refrain from those who have opposed such talks in the past. We shall be told that this would amount to betrayal of our allies—to "dividing up the world" into two spheres of interest—and that we cannot tolerate anything except the standard Big Four conference, three on our side and one on theirs.

Actually, of course, it would be perfectly possible to keep faith with our allies—to consult them fully, take their interests into consideration at every stage—and still conduct a bilateral negotiation. Indeed, if they were asked, most of our allies who sincerely want peace would probably encourage such negotiations should a fair prospect of success be visible. Only those with a vested interest in tension, conflict and ultimate war—those, in other words, who can be expected to oppose any negotiation which has a chance of success—would need to be alarmed by properly safeguarded bilateral talks.

Why should the Russians propose bilateral talks? The cynical can speculate that they hope thus to induce the United States to sell out its friends and allies. But it is just as possible that their motive is the simple one of wanting talks which have the best chance of real success. Is not that the kind of talks our nation is interested in also? Do not such talks offer more hope of progress than elaborate conferences held under the spotlight of propaganda and publicity?

If the Russians are truly serious about sincerely negotiating basic issues—and Mikoyan's visit should provide guidance on that—our government ought to stand ready to negotiate in any forum and any form.

The Young Turks Win

The Young Turks beat the Old Guard when House Republicans voted 74 to 70 to oust Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr. as their party leader and give the post to Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana. Martin is 74 years old. Halleck is 58.

Halleck hardly qualifies as a raging radical; generally his record is about like Senator Dirksen's, and on occasion he has been as willing to march with the right wing as anybody else. But in a revolt against party leadership, any change is a significant change. The liberal Republicans alone could not have ousted Martin; but his ouster should strengthen their voice in the party.

The Massachusetts veteran had held the leadership for 20 years, and he refused to surrender it in negotiations held just before the party caucus. He did offer a compromise under which the new post of assistant floor leader would have been created, and he also offered to let the full Republican membership of 153 elect the chairman of the Republican House Policy Committee, a post which he had also held. But the offer was rejected, and the vote disproved his claim that he had a clear majority.

Martin's defeat is less a personal rebuke than a protest against policies and strategy which were blamed for the Republican disaster in the last elections. Halleck, as a matter of fact, has been acting as unofficial assistant leader for some time. No doubt, he will now attempt to give the party's House delegation a new look more appealing to the electorate than the grand old pattern.

Aside from partisan considerations, this revolt against the old leadership should be healthy, and no harm would be done if it spread into the ranks of the Democrats.

Rep. John McCormack of Massachusetts, for example, has been Democratic floor leader just about as long as Joe Martin was Republican floor leader. Like Martin he is an experienced Congressman, but one who responds to the old slogans of bygone battles rather than the needs of a new age. Just as Martin would have kept his job if his party had won the elections, however, McCormack seems safe in his.

Segregation in the Unions

The indictment which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has brought against a major group of trade unions, five of them based on cases in the St. Louis area, is one of which labor unionism as a whole should be heartily ashamed.

NAACP Labor Secretary Herbert Hill shows that these union locals practice segregation in the most flagrant manner, restrict Negro members to minor jobs, deny them important work opportunities including those on Government contract, and cheat them of the fruits of seniority. In the St. Louis and East St. Louis area, locals cited are those of the plumbers and pipefitters, plasterers and cement masons, hod carriers and common laborers, railway and steamship clerks, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Unless the plea to the AFL-CIO civil rights department brings prompt results, the NAACP serves notice it will take legal action.

The constitution of the AFL-CIO avows the purpose "to encourage all workers without regard to race, color or national origin to share in the full benefits of union organization." Even if it did not, the dignity of work and of the worker is basic to all unionism, and the labor movement would not have much of a plausible philosophy left without it. How long will the AFL-CIO, which has already moved against goon control, defer moving against racist control, which also dishonors its name and frustrates its valid purposes?

"GOING SOMEWHERE, YOUNG FELLOW?"

The Year Virginia Closed the Schools

Norfolk Newspaper Says State May Remember 1958 for Shameful Retreat

The Mirror of Public Opinion

From The Virginian-Pilot

So far as the future histories of this state can be anticipated now, the year 1958 will be best known as the year Virginia closed the public schools.

This was the year when the automatic operation of Virginia law, moving precisely as the state's governmental leadership and its General Assembly had provided, reached out to shut and lock the doors of a Warren county high school in Front Royal, of two schools in Charlottesville, and of three junior high schools and three high schools in Norfolk.

By that same act the state denied nearly 13,000 boys and girls, some 10,000 of them in Norfolk, the kind of education which the people of Virginia had in mind when they wrote into their Constitution with wide approval and great confidence these words:

"The General Assembly shall establish and maintain an efficient system of public free schools throughout the state." (The italics are ours.)

Had anyone predicted a few years ago the abandonment of this fundamental doctrine, which generations of Virginians regarded as a foundation of modern life itself, he would have been called foolish and irresponsible. Yet the year 1958 witnessed this blunt reversal of the educational course of democratic America in these three communities in Virginia and for these nearly 13,000 young Virginians.

That is what has made the year just ended unique in Virginia history and, save for another school-closing in Arkansas, unique in American history. That is the shame of 1958. It is not enough to say, as the state has said in effect, that closing nine schools and kicking nearly 13,000 young people out of public education to shift for themselves is justified by the difficulties of obeying the law.

Of course the difficulties are there. Of course the changing of the customs of decades is painful. Of course perplexities exist and prejudices intrude. Of course law is a hard problem in enforcement and requires the most serious consideration when it runs counter to the deep wishes of majorities of people in a broad region—and of Virginia.

"Gosh, It's Nearly Time for the Closing of Schools"

No one with knowledge of Southern life thinks there is anything easy about dealing with the situations that confront us all.

But the mark of Virginia's political shame is that in this confusion it found no better method than abandoning public education entirely rather than follow the courts' directions about admitting a few Negro children into all-white schools.

This is not a policy which Virginia can continue. It is so patently self-defeating that calmer judgment would find ways of getting rid of it even if it was not probable—as governmental leaders acknowledge—that the statutes for closing schools will be declared unconstitutional.

The punishment of innocent children is too severe. The desertion of a doctrine of education on which democracy itself rests runs too much against basic American convictions and beliefs, many of which originated or first found nobility of expression in Virginia. The damage in prestige is too grave. The loss in business, in commerce, in industry—in a state which just begins to realize that it has lagged in new efforts in these respects—is too costly even in prospect and in early results. It would be disastrous in the long run.

The year that has run out has carried Virginia, and especially Norfolk, where the penalty exacted has been the heaviest, far down a defeatist road. We cannot continue this way. The state is bound by every obligation of governmental principles and human dignity and decency, and its own self-interest, to find a better policy than the one we live under.

That policy is collapsing before our eyes. But there will be small gain, or none at all, if in substitution the government of Virginia thinks it can stand still, or move backward in a changing age. It cannot. The question Virginians must ask themselves on this New Year's Day is what they can, and will, do in 1959 to recover from the tragedy of 1958.

Fluoridation in Philadelphia

From Dental Health High-Lights

A decrease of nearly 50 per cent in dental decay of permanent teeth among the city's school children and of 43 per cent in tooth extractions has been reported by Dr. James P. Dixon, Philadelphia Health Commissioner. This is the fourth year of the fluoridation program in that city.

"Although public health authorities have held until now that it takes at least six years to get the full benefit of water fluoridation," Dr. Dixon said, "we decided to evaluate the process at the end of the fourth year and to announce our findings to the public. These findings are truly amazing."

The conclusions were based on a study of 17,617 six-year-old school children during the 1954-55 school year as compared to a study of 21,834 six-year-olds during 1957-1958.

"While water fluoridation costs each person about 7.6 cents a year (a total of $120,000 per year), at the present rate it will save a million dollars a year in reduced dental care for the people of Philadelphia," Dr. Dixon pointed out.

Between Book Ends

Modern Youth, the Old West

STRIKE HEAVEN ON THE FACE, by Charles Calitri. (Crown, 344 pgs., 344 pgs., $3.96.)

When one considers this world and the beings who inhabit it, only the ironical, in grim humor, or the stupid, in unreason, can talk about "the problem of juvenile delinquency." For who has made the earth we know?

This is why this novel, which spotlights a high school "sex" club, is flawed in its basic structure. For, in sensationalizing the most sensational element of a small minority, it seeks to cash in—despite its avowed moral aims and the asserted sincerity of its high school teacher-author.

Charles Calitri

True, the story not only focuses on naked games of leapfrog for teen-agers at play. It also plays up adults who take a night out at stag shows. And finally it exposes the inner weakness of its "hero"—a high school "dean of students" who stands for clean-living, in the arms of an understanding woman teacher, before going home to Grace, the usual waiting wife.

So it reveals its own nature and the reflective quality of its maker, Mr. Calitri knows, he is saying, human nature. He should know also that values endure; are not to be shed or put on like a convenient garment. If his high school dean is to "clean up" and become principal as reward for his righteous courage, he must have principle himself.

Or do we take what is only a story too seriously? Only when such a novel assumes airs, with titular lines from Macbeth—

"Each new morn . . . new sorrows Strike heaven on the face . . ."
"What I can redress . . . I will."

Thus Mr. Calitri sets out to redress the sorrows of schools ruled by power-seeking politicians, youngsters led astray by a sex-crazy culture. The times are out of joint and Walter Davis, his high school "dean," will set them right! If only he can find the way—and get the principal's paycheck and chair.

ARMY LIFE ON THE WESTERN FRONTIER, Selections from Official Reports (1826-1845), by Col. George Croghan. Edited by Francis Paul Prucha. (University of Oklahoma Press, 187 pgs., $4.00.)

This little volume, excellently edited by the Rev. Francis Paul Prucha, S.J., is more of interest to serious students of the early west than the casual reader of "westerns."

It presents an intimate, firsthand picture—albeit, a rather colorless one—of what western military outposts were really like—their personnel, equipment, quarters, etc. The picture is drawn from the reports of Col. George Croghan, an inspector general of the Army from 1826 to 1845, who examined the little garrisons along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers with a critical eye.

Of particular interest to St. Louisans are Col. Croghans's comments on Jefferson Barracks, which he visited nine times between 1827 and 1844.

Father Prucha has done a painstaking research job on this project, arranging topically Croghan's reports on all phases of military life.

WALTER LIPPMANN

What Is a Senate Majority?

WASHINGTON.

WITH ALL DUE RESPECT to Senator Paul Douglas, whom I admire very much, the question at issue in the Senate is not whether the majority shall rule. The question is what kind of majority shall rule. For there are many sorts of majorities.

Senator Douglas wants one more than half of the Senators elected to rule, which would be 50 Senators. But on most of the business of the Senate one more than half of a quorum, which would be 26 votes, can pass a bill. Thus Senator Douglas himself recognizes that on a question of closing debate, a bigger majority should be required than for ordinary legislation. The present rules of the Senate require 66 Senators to close a debate, and exclude closure of a debate on a change in the rules.

Douglas

The Johnson amendment, which will probably be adopted, requires a two-thirds majority of those present and voting, which can theoretically be as many as 66 and as few as 34, to close debate.

Senator John Sherman Cooper has now suggested that the majority be three-fifths, which would, theoretically, permit closure by as few as 30 Senators up to as many as 59 Senators, depending on how many Senators were present and voting.

Senate Not Like House.

Senator Douglas is, therefore, begging the question when he talks as if "majority rule" were something simple and obvious to all men. Moreover, he ignores the nature of the Senate, which is the representative in our system of a federation of states.

In the Senate, what does it mean to speak of "majority rule?" A majority of what? A majority of the states or a majority of the people of the United States?

In the House of Representatives the members represent, more or less exactly, the voters themselves, and a member from New York and a member from Alaska or Nevada represents approximately the same number of people. But this is not true of the Senate.

Unequal Representation.

Thus when Senator Douglas wants 50 Senators to be able to close a debate and to pass a bill, he calls it majority rule which is "the basic principle of our government." But suppose the 50 Senators represent the 25 smallest states, do they represent a majority of the people of the United States?

Taking the figures for the census of 1950, the 25 smallest states which have 50 Senators, represent about 29,000,000 people, or less than one-fifth of the population in 1950. Against these 25 states there were three states, New York, California, and Pennsylvania, which had 7,000,000 more people in them than all the 25 combined.

The moral of all this is that in the Senate, "majority rule" is not something which all good men must favor and only reactionaries or worse can oppose. The question of what kind of majority shall prevail is not one of simple arithmetic or of absolute principle but of political wisdom.

For those of us who prefer the Johnson to the Douglas amendment of Rule XXII, there are two outstanding considerations.

Stampede From Liberty.

One, which refers to the civil rights of Negroes, is that we wish the Federal Government to proceed if not with the consent, then at least with the assent, of a large body of Southern opinion. We think that legislation which does not have at least the assent of the liberal South will prove to be unenforcebale.

The other consideration which moves us is that we do not wish to entrust the civil liberties of all our people, not only under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, but under the whole Bill of Rights, to simple and narrow majorities. We live in a time of danger when panic is always possible and panics can easily produce a stampede away from liberty.

The Johnson amendment to the rules, which requires at the most 66 votes to pass a controversial measure, is a reasonable rule. Legislation could be blocked by an unending filibuster only if all the Senators of 17 states participated in it.

This would not, as some have suggested who side with Senator Douglas, give the South an absolute veto on legislation to promote the civil rights of Negroes.

Doubtful Legislation.

In the Deep South there are only seven states in which there has been no desegregation at primary or secondary level and they have 14 Senators. In 10 other states of the South and the borderland there is some desegregation. All of these states would have to combine with the Deep South to impose a "veto."

Now legislation which is opposed by all the states of a whole section of the country, including the states which are beginning to comply with the new principle of desegregation, is very doubtful legislation indeed. It promises more trouble than anything else.

Presumably the Johnson amendment will be adopted, as Senator Douglas himself forecast in his appearance on "Meet the Press" on Sunday evening. When it is adopted, it will not stop his long, persistent, and invaluable labors on behalf of civil rights.

DOCTORS ARE URGED TO ANTICIPATE NEEDS

New Medical Society Head Discusses Effects of Third Party Concept.

The medical profession must learn to anticipate community needs and offer constructive programs of its own, instead of being forced into a position of opposing programs advanced by others, Dr. Robert B. Bassett told the St. Louis Medical Society last night.

Dr. Bassett, who was formally installed as the society's new president, said in his inaugural address that organized medicine had no quarrel with the basic philosophy of so-called "third party medicine."

The third party concept, it was explained, applies to situations in which groups or individuals come between the doctor and his patient, and alter the doctor-patient relationship in some manner. Examples are various types of medical prepayment plans, industrial medicine, and labor health plans.

Usually Beneficial.

Dr. Bassett said the third party alterations were usually beneficial but that in some ways the effect could be detrimental to both the patient and physician. He emphasized that some third party plans had drifted away from the tradition of permitting the patient free choice of physician and hospital.

It was pointed out by the new president that doctors themselves, by the present system of closed hospital staffs, already had deprived patients of free choice to an extent. For example, if a patient wants an operation performed by a specific surgeon, he must go to a hospital where that surgeon is on the staff.

Dr. Bassett said the closed staff system had definitely contributed to better patient care, but he said that some third party plans were now contending that they, too, had the right and duty to assess the qualifications of physicians serving their members.

"If this selection process is conducted on a purely scientific basis, and is kept free of petty politics, I fail to see any valid argument against it," he said.

Cites Responsibility.

Dr. Bassett said that if the medical profession insisted on the free choice principle, then it was the responsibility of the doctors as a group to insure that every physician taking part in third party medicine maintain his capabilities at the highest possible standard.

While the American Medical Association has accepted the third party concept as necessary and good, he said, the profession stands unalterably opposed to further encroachment by the federal government in medical practice.

Dr. Bassett said the A.M.A. Council on Medical Service was holding conferences with representatives of various types of third party plans in an effort to iron out problems at a national level.

Promise of Better Care.

"Most of the doctors who have studied these problems agree they can be worked out, and that all privately supported third party plans which conform to our code of medical ethics, and which delegate to medical men the formulation of medical policies, will bring to our people more and better medical care, and at the same time will become our main bulwark against government medicine and the welfare state."

The St. Louis Medical Society's retiring president, Dr. Arthur W. Neilson, received a presidential key.

'ENDGAME' OPENS AT CRYSTAL PALACE

By MYLES STANDISH

The Crystal Palace Players, at the exotic saloon-theater on Olive street east of Boyle avenue, last night gave a powerful performance of Samuel Beckett's mystical drama, "Endgame."

The drama is very similar in tone and execution to Beckett's equally incomprehensible "Waiting for Godot," which the Palace troupe did a year ago.

Beckett very seldom makes a really clear statement. His words are simple, deceptively so. His dialogue sentences are crisply short. But they usually don't make direct sense or carry a connected argument. Instead they hit obliquely. They create an abstract aura. One statement usually doesn't mean much, any more than one brush stroke of a painted abstraction means much. But the total impact is instantaneous and recognizable. The words are elusive, but the style allusive.

In this case, as in "Godot," which was more rounded in scope, it is the statement with poetical effect, of a profound pessimism. An overwhelming one, almost beyond bitterness. Beckett evidently believes in nothing, except possibly the existence of futility, and vice versa. And as he states no argument in really logical form, it would be impossible to argue with him, as it would be with an abstract painting.

The play is Spartan in its outlines. There is merely a basement setting, with two high sidewalk level windows. A slovenly, moronic janitor named Clov, Hamm, a blind and crippled man, with white eyelids under his dark glasses, who sleeps in a throne-like chair under a sheet. And his parents, Nagg and Nell, who live in ashcans. The effect sounds ludicrous. It isn't.

There is no dramatic action in the play, and very little physical action. The four characters just talk, and die. But such is the effect of Beckett's mysticism and stage magic, that it held a drinking audience spellbound for a solid 90 minutes last night.

Producer Theodore J. Flicker, who did an evocative job of directing, thinks Beckett's real message in this is love. I can't quite see that. Blind Hamm yearns for love, it is obvious. But it never reaches him. He substitutes resignation. The whole tone is so pessimistic as to be defeatist.

When Hamm first comes from under his sheet he says proudly: "Can there be misery loftier than mine?" He asks Clov: "What time is it?" "Zero," replies Clov. That is the opitome of the play. Hamm asks Clov if his father in the ashcan is still alive. Clov says, "He's crying." "Then," says Hamm with a shrug, "He's living. . . . Did you ever have an instant of happiness?"

He also says things like this: "You weep and weep, for nothing, so as not to laugh, and little by little, you begin to grieve"; "Moment upon moment, pattering down, like the millet grains of—that old Greek, and all life long you wait for that to mount up to a life"; "The end is in the beginning—and yet you go on"; and, finally, "Old endgame lost of old, play and lose and have done with losing."

Clov chimes in, "I say to myself, sometimes Clov, you must learn to suffer better than if you want them to weary of punishing you."

Proprietor Jay Landesman, at the finish, should pass out knives of handy throat-cutting size and bottles of brandy and let the members of the audience take their choice.

For the effect, whether you like it or not, is that strong. This is brilliant theater. And Thomas Aldredge, a gifted actor, makes it all the more shattering with a powerful acrid portrayal of Hamm. Barry Primus is also first-rate as Clov, and Alexander Viespi and Annette Hunt, aided by ghoulish makeup, do very well by Nagg and Nell. Dave Moon's set and costumes contribute to the stirringly grisly mood. The play will run four weeks.

FURNITURE THAT HANGS DISPLAYED AT CHICAGO SHOW

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Designers finally decided to do something for women who are tired of tugging furniture about each time they clean house, and for apartment dwellers who must conserve space.

The result is a wide display of "hanging" furniture at the annual International Home Furnishings Show. Cabinets, desks, consoles, bars, chests—even a high fidelity speaker which can be used in pairs for stereophonic sound or singly, attached to a television set or record player—are made to install on the wall.

And designer Lawrence Peabody said he is working on a hanging chair.

Robert Stone Jordan of Audio Artists, Ltd. designed the "decrosonic sound system" to eliminate bulky and often unsightly speakers. Jordan's speaker is contained in an easy-to-hang panel screened by handpainted silk or grass cloth.

Peabody's collection of hanging furniture is slotted to fit on a 24-inch metal rod which Peabody said any amateur can install without calling in a handyman.

Pettit Blooms in Garden: 38 Points, 35 Rebounds as Hawks Win

Baylor Is Held to 12 By Hagan

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—"Write Bobby, Bobby, Bobby," said Ed Macauley. "He was the story. That's the best he's played since I became coach."

"Hey, Pettit," called out Ben Kerner, "What else did you do?"

This was in the dressing room last night after the St. Louis Hawks had posted a 112-95 victory over Minneapolis in the first game of a Madison Square Garden double-header. Everyone was dressing hurriedly to catch the plane that would take the Hawks and Lakers on to Texas, where they'll play each other tonight in Houston and tomorrow in Dallas.

Rebound Record.

And all Mr. Pettit had done was score 38 points, haul in 35 rebounds, pick up three assists and do his share of the defensive work when necessary during a 44-minute chore.

The 35 rebounds constituted a record for the most famous floor in basketball. Boston's Bill Russell had a 34-rebound night against Syracuse here nearly two years ago.

With all that, Pettit wasn't the only big factor in the Hawks' ninth victory in their last 11 games. Cliff Hagan, who usually attracts attention for his offensive skills, did a first-rate defensive job on Elgin Baylor.

"What did Baylor get, 12 points?" asked Macauley. "More important was the way Cliff stopped him at the times we really needed it.

Ferrari Helps Out.

"And Al Ferrari did a fine job out there, too. Our small men got in foul trouble early, and Al had a lot of responsibility out there."

Ferrari played 23 minutes and did more than his 8-point, 0-assist box score record shows. Hagan, with his good defense, didn't exactly neglect his offensive chores, either. He scored 21.

The Hawks had a easy time winning. They rolled to a 30-11 lead in 10 minutes and led by from nine to 20 points the rest of the way. The Lakers, with big Larry Foust and Vern Mikkelsen starting to hit, drew within nine points early in the second half but got no closer.

Mikkelsen's three point play whittled the Hawks lead to 49-40 just after the intermission but within 10 minutes Pettit and company had their biggest lead at 81-61.

Elgin Can't Tick.

Hagan stuck so close to Baylor that the freshman from Seattle rarely could get off a good shot. He fired 17 times but hit only on five and wound up with half his season's average.

The victory lifted the world champion Hawk record to 24-10, a .706 pace two games before the mid-point of the schedule.

If they can keep it up, the Hawks can break the record for most victories by a Western Division team. Minneapolis won 48 while finishing first in 1953. Continuing at the current rate, the Hawks would win 50 or 51.

And when you look at their board power, shooting strength, ability to run and bench help, it's hard to see why they shouldn't.

Russian Goalie in Spectacular Save

EUGENE ERKIN, goalie of Russia's touring ice hockey team, makes a sparkling save as BOB WHITE (10) of the Michigan U.-Michigan State U. picked team piles into the goal. The puck, deflected by the goalie, is not visible. The Russians defeated the college boys, 7-3, for the third victory in four games of the tour. The game was played in Detroit.

Selvy Gets 20 Points, Knicks Win

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (UPI)—The New York Knickerbockers scored a 118-108 victory over the Syracuse Nationals in the second game of a Madison Square Garden doubleheader last night after the Hawks beat Minneapolis in the National Basketball Association opener.

The Knicks, led by Kenny Sears and Frank Selvy, broke the game open midway in the first quarter and never were headed thereafter.

New York took a 13-point lead into the second quarter and only a hot spree by Hal Greer late in the half enabled the Nats to pull within eight points, 57-49.

Selvy Hits 20.

Sears and Selvy, who led the Knicks' scoring with 24 and 20 points respectively, again opened the gap to 13 shortly after the second half started. And from then on, the crowd of 12,016 saw the Knicks win as they pleased.

Phil Jordon's pivot goal with 26 seconds to play gave the Detroit Pistons a 107-105 victory over Philadelphia in the second game of a pro doubleheader at Philadelphia.

The hothanded Boston Celtics, pressed only in the first period, romped over the Cincinnati Royals, 109-105, in the opener. A 44-point fourth quarter by the Royals set a Philadelphia court record. The Celtics broke the game open when they outscored the Royals 26-7 in one stretch of the second period.

The Royals, paced by the shooting of Jack Twyman, stayed with Boston at the outset, before going down to their twenty-seventh loss in 35 games.

Led by reserve Frank Ramsey, Boston compiled a 59-39 halftime lead and was never pressed from then on.

Pistons Begin Pumping.

Detroit put on a fourth period rally to erase a Warrior lead which had reached 18 points late in the third period. The Pistons used an all-court press to upset the Philadelphia offense and cut into the big lead.

The Warriors made only two of 21 field goal attempts in the fourth period and tallied only 12 points. Detroit, behind at 88-70 with three minutes to play in the third quarter, rallied behind Gene Shue's fine all around play and finally tied Philadelphia at 103 on Jordon's rebound goal. Paul Arizin stuck in a long stab to put the Warriors ahead but Shue's jump shot tied it and then Jordon, driving in, dropped in the winning goal.

Nat coach Paul Seymour and the Knicks' Fuzzy Levane both protested officials of the opposing clubs sitting on the teams' benches.

Levane's protest was aimed at Dan Biasone, general manager of Syracuse, who sat on the Nat bench. Seymour retaliated with a protest of his own when he spotted Red Holzman, a scout and assistant coach for New York, sitting next to Levane. The last time the Nats played here, Biasone also turned up on his team bench and while New York lodged a protest, it was disallowed by the league.

Buchholz, Olmedo and MacKay In West Australia Semifinals

PERTH, Australia, Jan. 7 (AP)—Alex Olmedo, who won back the Davis Cup for the United States last week, suffered a badly sprained stomach muscle in the western Australian tennis championships today. He may be forced to withdraw from both the singles and doubles.

Olmedo disclosed the injury after he had advanced to the semifinals by beating Rod Laver, top-seeded Australian, 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 3-6, 6-3.

"It happened in the first set when I reached for a ball," Alex said.

Olmedo and Barry MacKay are scheduled to play Sweden's Ulf Schmidt and Jan Lindquist in the doubles semifinals tomorrow.

Olmedo's victory over Laver gave the American Davis Cup squad three players in the semis. Earlier MacKay of Dayton, O., and Earl Buchholz of St. Louis had reached the round of four.

MacKay crushed Ulf Schmidt of Sweden 6-2, 6-4, 6-2 and Buchholz whipped Spain's 17-year-old Luis Arilla 7-5, 6-4, 4-7, 7-5.

In the semifinals it will be Buchholz against MacKay and Olmedo against Andres Gimeno of Spain who advanced by defeating Tony Ryan of Australia, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

Olmedo, a Peruvian living in California, had to stage a great finish to beat Laver. Apparently weary and suffering from emotional strain, he relaxed after winning the first two sets easily.

Pesky flies and the intense heat bothered the players and there were occasional temperamental outbursts.

MacKay unleashed some of the best tennis he has shown during the Australian campaign in beating the hard-hitting Schmidt.

The 24-year-old Ohio slugger never lost his service and his ground strokes were the deadliest they have been since his great showing in the Davis Cup challenge round at Melbourne a year ago.

Despite his six-foot-four hulk, he moved over the court with speed, slamming back everything the Swede had to offer.

Barry swept to four straight games before Schmidt was able to win a game on his service.

MacKay won the second set with a break through in the ninth game, Schmidt double faulting at game point, then raced through the third set as Schmidt's errors multiplied.

Seeks Junior Crown, Too.

Young Buchholz, who also is trying for the junior crown, turned on, in the first set, the flashiest tennis he has shown since he gained the finals of New South Wales championships at Sydney.

Serving deep and powerfully, he dominated the match against the edgy Spaniard who served eight double faults and was foot faulted three times.

In the third set Buchholz's first service lost both steam and accuracy and he dropped it four times in losing the set.

In the fourth set the Missouri youngster, who is just 18, forced a break through in the twelfth game to clinch the match.

Sharp service returns, particularly of his back hand, forced the Spaniard into errors.

Buchholz at times was brilliant, his passing shots kicking up chalk off the side line and corners and leaving Arillo stretching for shots in vain. At other times the lean crewcut high school senior looked bored with it all and played his shots very loosely. But he had too much power and court finesse for his opponent.

Both Buchholz and Arilla displayed bursts of temper. Buchholz three times slung his racquet hard against the ground and Arilla let his bat fly so often that he was cautioned during intermission by the elder members of his team.

MacKay Is Heckled.

Perry Jones, American Davis Cup captain, protested to officials after several calls were questioned and linesmen were provided for the last set.

Buchholz said "It was one of the worst umpired matches I have ever seen, but it was not entirely the umpire's fault. We should have had linesmen for a quarterfinal match. Arilla got some very bum decisions. I had some bad calls but I think Arilla got more of them and at more critical times.

The crowd heckled MacKay after he missed an easy shot and swung his racquet arm in anger in the ninth game of his second set against Schmidt. The racquet flew into the stands about six rows up. Fortunately no one was hit.

MacKay looked into the crowd and apologized, "I am sorry, it slipped, honestly it did."

Andres Gimeno of Spain also gained the semifinals by beating Tony Ryan, Australia, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

Dollars and Sense.

The Cardinals' organization didn't make $815,000 in 1957 because Frank Lane was general manager or lose $21,891 last year because Bing Devine had inherited the job.

The net profit two seasons ago was abnormally high, just as last season's loss had to be considered unusual in a year in which, though dropping about 120,000 paid admissions, the Cardinals still attracted 1,063,730 cash customers to Busch Stadium.

Take away the $550,000 realized from the sale of the Rochester club to civic interests in the upper New York community and the black ink in '57 would have been just slightly more than the $250,000 cleared in 1956. Subtract the additional $434,984 spent for players last year, mostly in bonuses, and the plus-side of the ledger would have had a comparable margin.

Actually, the Cardinals had decided to get rid of the Rochester millstone even before Lane came to town in the fall of 1956. Although Frank had little interest in the farm system, it's to be assumed that if he had remained here, he would have recommended that when the bonus rule was lifted, Gussie Busch permit the Cardinals to join the financial free-for-all.

During 1958 the Cardinals put out $8000 to $12,000 each to some 10 to 15 kids you and I never heard of—in addition to the estimated $360,000 paid 10 publicized youngsters.

The Redbirds are believed to have given Outfielder Mike Shannon close to $60,000, Outfielder Jimmy Beauchamp, Pitcher Ray Sadecki and Outfielder Elmer (Bee) Lindsey about $50,000 apiece, Catcher Ed Czernakowski around $40,000, Catcher Hank Kuhlmann approximately $30,000, Outfielder Bob Burda $25,000, Pitcher Fred Walker Jr. $25,000, Catcher Rich Rogers $15,000 and Outfielder Charles James an estimated $15,000.

Force-Feeding?

James, given the least, probably is the closest to reaching the big leagues. The former Missouri U. halfback might make it this year if he progresses further in spring training and if the Redbirds prove to be hard up enough for power to force-feed a second-year man.

"Actually," said Devine, "we won't know for a time whether we got our share of good ones in the bonus rush last year, but we like to think we did. We do know that with rare exception the kids had good first seasons and in many cases exceeded expectations."

In Devine's judgment, the heavy expenditure was necessary. "The competition for the better-looking prospects was tremendous when the bonus rule was lifted (in December, 1957)," he said. "We had a simple choice—either meet the competition or quit."

In a wild spending spree major league clubs committed some $6,500,000 to untried young men — usually spread out over the next three to five years—and now, as the St. Louis general manager sees it, the jag is over.

"There'll be much less spending for fewer boys," Devine said. "The backlog of better-looking players, many of them who had been in college, unwilling to sign for the previous $4000 bonus limit, has been pretty well absorbed. Economically speaking, clubs just have to be more selective and, besides, the new unrestricted draft of first-year players will cut down on the number of bonus payments."

Caution Ahead.

Bing pointed out that under the rule adopted last month professional newcomers either must be promoted to the big league roster or be subject to draft. "Take the 10 we signed," Bing said. "If that unrestricted draft had been in effect, we'd be able to handle only—let's say — James, Shannon and Sadecki on our winter list. The rest would be up for grabs. Obviously we wouldn't—and won't—risk so much money and time on an athlete if we're likely to lose him."

Devine noted that since last season ended, the Cardinals had spent more than $100,000 for four minor league players, Pitchers Marshall Bridges, Dick Luebke and Gary Blaylock and Outfielder Joe Durham.

"Even though it was apparent we could finish in the black by passing up any one or two of them," he said, "Dick Meyer and Mr. Busch gave us the go-ahead."

The Cardinals' payroll again will be close to $500,000, despite departure of Alvin Dark, Del Ennis and Wally Moon, it was explained, and working-agreement costs, hiked about $40,000 under rules designed to help minor league clubs last year, will go up another estimated $40,000 this year under liberalized subsidization of the starved minors.

Still, despite constantly-growing travel expenses and other spiraling costs, Devine envisioned a brighter season financially in 1959. He mentioned the incomplete sale of the Houston club, which lost $101,000 last year. Marty Marion and partner Milton Fischmann are paying about $100,000 for the Cardinals' Texas League franchise and some 18 minor league players.

Streamlining.

"Over the last several years," Bing explained, "we've streamlined the farm system, (switching from expensive ownership clubs to costly, yet less expensive working agreements. We're now at an efficient, irreducible minimum of clubs in our player-development program. The value of owning a club rather than just working with it is slight compared with the fact that you can budget your losses when you've got an agreement to help someone else's operation, but you can lose limitlessly when it's your own property."

For the first time in some years the Cardinals have nudged up their ticket prices for the 1959 season. The timing after finishing in a disappointing tie for fifth and sixth was about as bad as the timing of the club's hitless wonders, but apparently the boost was overdue. From the depths of the depression, the bleacher seat has gone up only from 50 cents to 75, the pavilion from 75 cents to $1 and the general admission from a buck to $1.25. Even the 25-year hike in the reserved seat to $2 has been modest.

"Despite our bad season, the advance ticket sale has held up," said Devine. "When they talk about the better and more understanding baseball fans, the St. Louis area has got them."

Adams Has Praise for Russians

DETROIT, Jan. 7 (AP)—Russia's touring hockey team took an another American foe last night with the same result.

The Soviets defeated 7-3 a combined Michigan-Michigan State team composed mainly of Canadians who had played the game since boyhood. The collegians were unable to cope with the Russians' faster skating and sharper passing.

Jack Adams, Detroit Red Wings' general manager, was among the 6783 who watched the game. He had high praise for the Soviet team:

"These Russians are wonderful stickhandlers and skaters and playmakers, but I wonder how they would stand up against pro-style body-checking."

The victory kept the Russians unbeaten in four games on their visit to the United States. They previously had tied once and beaten the United States nationals twice on American ice.

Led by Alexis Guryshev, the Russians had more stamina than the younger collegians. Guryshev, 33 years old, tallied twice. He assisted on two of his team-mates' goals.

Four of Russia's goals came when the collegians were short-handed because of penalties. Seven penalties were called, four on the Russians.

They were to depart today for Colorado, where they meet Colorado College Friday and Denver University Saturday.

Boyd, Mims On TV; Meet Third Time

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Bobby Boyd, seeking a ranking among the middleweights, and Holly Mims of Washington, D.C., meet tonight in a televised 10-rounder at the Chicago Stadium. (KTVI, Channel 2, will carry the bout at 9 o'clock).

Mims, a 30-year-old campaigner of 10 years' ring service, was ranked as a slight favorite, although Boyd holds an edge in their two previous fights. The lanky Chicagoan earned a 10-round nod over Mims in 1956 and the pair fought to a 10-round draw almost a year ago.

Buds Go Overtime In Masters' Loop

The first-place Budweisers will get a double crack at their world record of 3858 when they take to lanes 7-8 tonight at Floriss Lanes in the resumption of Masters Bowling League competition.

Budweiser will oppose H & B in a postponed match starting at 7 o'clock, then tackle Club Imperial in the regularly scheduled match at 8. The Buds and H & B will resume their match after the regular match is completed.

Youthful Illini, again sporting the services of Dennis Chapis, recent hero at the World's Invitational, will be battling to keep second place when it faces Woodside.

Speed-Skating

The city speed-skating series will resume tomorrow night at 6:30 o'clock at Steinberg rink in Forest Park.

Cuban 'Bush' League: Fans With Beards Get in Free

HAVANA, Jan. 7 (UPI)—It was real "bush league" here last night.

Cuban League baseball officials admitted all fans wearing beards free into Gran Stadium as the shout "play ball" was heard in Havana for the first time since the revolution.

The stands were filled with bewhiskered rebel guerrilla fans, most of whom hadn't seen a baseball game in two years.

They saw Mariano defeat Cienfuegos, 5-1, as Al Cicotte, property of the Cleveland Indians, scattered nine hits for his tenth victory. Pedro Ramos, a Cuban native, was the loser.

Bears Feature Rebounding in 69-44 Victory Over Wayne

In the Ozarks

By Z. Lee Stokely

Ozark Sportsman and Outdoors Writer.

The creation of special National Forest Recreational Areas on Missouri's Current and Eleven Points rivers was announced recently by Regional Forester Arthur W. Greeley of Milwaukee. Greeley is in charge of all the national forests in the Middle West. These include, of course, Clark National Forest in southeastern Missouri, through which flows a portion of these two spring-fed Ozark streams.

Stokely

In commenting on his announcement, Greeley said, "The creation of the new special Recreational Areas under authority delegated by the Secretary of Agriculture has given special status to the areas. The action recognizes the public's growing awareness of their superlative esthetic values. But actually the Forest Service has been aware of the unique recreational opportunities that these rivers afford since the Missouri National forests were first created in the mid-thirties. For all practical purposes the recent creation of the special recreational areas is essentially a reaffirmation of the basic Recreational Plan originally approved in January, 1936."

A few years ago this writer accompanied Chief Forester, Richard McArdle, Washington, D. C., on a three-day float trip on the Current river. It was McArdle's first visit to this area. He was highly impressed by the magnificient vistas along this stream and expressed an opinion that some day this would become a recreational area for the Middle West.

Many prominent sportsmen are asking that the Current-Eleven Points area be considered by the newly-appointed Federal Recreational Resources Committee. The 25-member advisory council, appointed by President Eisenhower, will find many suitable and picturesque sites in the nationwide survey but the thinly settled Ozark hill section of the two swift, clear rivers should compare favorably with any to be found in the entire nation.

Outline of Plan

The proposed Forest Service development, according to Paul J. St. Amant, forest supervisor for this area, is as follows:

(1) Development of public recreational facilities on suitable sites of publicly-owned land along the stream edges and providing access points to them. Emphasis will be placed on public facilities, not organization camps, resorts or summer homes.

(2) Designation of a zone along both sides of the rivers which will be managed so as to preserve the esthetic and natural characteristics of the streams. This zone will vary, in accordance with the topography, from 200 feet to as much as one-fourth mile on each side of the streams.

(3) Management of the balance of the area which varies in width from one to one and one-half miles, under an intensive system of multiple-use management similar to that now practiced on all United States Forest Service lands. This would permit development of game food areas and harvesting of timber products so that the entire area would benefit from a land management viewpoint.

(4) Hunting and fishing would be permitted in the entire area with applicable state laws.

Work Under Way

When asked as to how much development there would be and how soon it might be expected, Regional Forester Greeley said, "While there won't be too many developed areas, there will be appreciably more than there are now. These will be simple facilities at carefully selected entry points, with access roads to them. As we now see it, we would like to have about a half-dozen entry points on public land on the lower Current river with simple facilities for about 125 camping and possibly 200 picnicking family units.

"On the Eleven Points river we visualize five or six points of entry with some 50-odd camping and 60 or 70 picnicking family units. Of course, should more of the stream side come into public ownership (Clark National Forest), this picture will be changed accordingly.

"Predicting how soon full development can be expected is another story. Some work is being done now. Should the Forest Service's nationwide Operation Outdoors program which was announced a couple of years ago be fully financed, it will still provide less than half the needed facilities in the next five years.

"The Forest Service is sure of this. The Current and Eleven Points rivers, as they now are, are a very valuable resource and asset to the Missouri Ozarks. The longer they remain unchanged, as the country around them does change, the more valuable and important they will become. The Forest Service is going to do its best to keep them as attractive as they are now."

Grab 56 To 22 by Visitors

By John J. Archibald

When you have lost three games in succession and eight out of 11 altogether, obviously it is a time to rebound. And that is what the Bears of Washington University did last night — they bounced back figuratively to whip Detroit's Wayne State and rebounded literally so well that the visitors hardly became acquainted with the ball in play.

Altogether the Bears of Coach Blair Gullion pulled down 56 rebounds to Wayne's 22. That is a percentage of .733 for the Bears. The scoring was almost as top-heavy, with Washington winning, 69-44 and hitting a high for the season.

After the game someone commented briefly upon 6-foot-7 Jim Hascall's sometimes ludicrous attempts to fit a basketball inside the steel ring (a kind official scorer charged him with just seven misses in eight attempts from the field last night), but Coach Gullion quickly came to the rescue of his amiable giant.

'A Fine Job.'

"I kept Hascall in there because of those 19 rebounds he got tonight," said Gullion. "Why he kept Wayne from ever getting organized in the first half. Hascall did a fine job, and I think his shooting will improve."

The Bears' rebounding success was helped, of course, by a lack of height on the part of the visiting Tartars. But Wayne did have a husky, 6-foot-4 center in Walt Koepke and the team's over-all height was not bad. There was just too much Hascall and Co. shouldering around under the baskets.

Lou Vesely with 19 points and Bob Schaulat with 14 dominated the Bears' scoring. Vesely hit on eight out of 18 field goal attempts and Schaulat sank seven out of 15. Washington had a .377 percentage to Wayne's .315, but the important difference was the fact that the Bears had 77 chances to Wayne's 54.

Success against Wayne, which has lost all five of the games it has played this season, cannot be judged as a sure sign that Gullion's team has arrived. Wayne, a member of the Presidents' Athletic Conference, was not only prohibited from playing any games during the holiday vacation but was not even permitted to hold a practice session. The Tartars, who advanced to the N.C.A.A. tournament semifinals just two seasons ago, have fallen far behind in just a brief interval.

Beloit College, which will visit the Field House on Saturday night, will provide a more significant test for the Bears.

NCAA Bid For More Authority

CINCINNATI, Ohio., Jan. 7 (UPI) — Delegates to the N.C.A.A. convention began business sessions today with tightening of eligibility rules for athletes, the hottest topic on the agenda.

The proposed legislation would give the National Collegiate Athletic Association the power to rule over the eligibility of any athlete attending member schools.

This and other top agenda matters, including an increase in the N.C.A.A. policy making group's powers, will be voted on Friday at the conclusion of the weeklong sessions attended by about 2200 of the nation's top college sports figures.

Recommendations by the American College Football Coaches Assn., one of several allied groups meeting concurrently, drew attention as preliminaries wound up.

The football coaches went on record as favoring a return of goal posts to the goal line and a liberalization of the limited substitution rules. Those were the two major recommendations the coaches will pass to the N.C.A.A. football rules committee which will meet next week in Los Angeles.

In other business yesterday, the N.C.A.A. elected two conferences to allied membership and one to a provisional membership, raising its total membership to 533 for an increase of 24 schools over last year.

The recommendation to liberalize the present substitution rule was a compromise between the platoon system, practiced by professionals, and the one now used by colleges.

Another recommendation was to permit one player from each team to consult with his coach during a time out on the field. Little said 80 per cent of the coaches favored the proposal.

The coaches will also recommend modification of the rule dealing with one-armed blocking.

Athletic Director Jim Corbett of Louisiana State, a member of the N.C.A.A. television committee, came out strongly for restricted TV. His views contrasted with those of Doug Mills, Illinois athletic director, who resigned from the committee because his efforts for unrestricted television have always been voted down.

Carter Benched as Budweisers Drop Two Games to Falstaffs

DON CARTER — STEVE NAGY — BILL LILLARD

It had about the same effect on the crowd as if Stan Musial were taken out of the game for a pinch-hitter. The wall-to-wall crowd at Palace Lanes saw it but could scarcely believe it. Don Carter, four-time Bowler of the Year who will be going for his fifth All-Star championship next week, was removed from the Budweiser lineup in the middle of the first game last night because he couldn't hit.

The move was at Don's suggestion. He had started miserably in the big match with the Bud's chief Champions Traveling League rivals, the Falstaffs. After six frames he had a collection of three spares, two misses and one split, and a total count of 80.

When Carter managed only another spare in the seventh frame, he asked captain Pat Patterson to put Bill Lillard in the lineup in his place. The Buds were some 13 marks behind the Falstaffs by then and the game was beyond recall, but there were two more important games to go. The warm-up that Lillard could get in the remaining three frames would help.

Lillard could salvage only a combined score of 144 for two of the nation's greatest tenpinners as the Falstaffs slugged the incredibly cold Buds, 1038 to 872.

Buzz Fazio's Falstaffs defeated the Budweisers again in the second game, 1078 to 941, to move within one length of the leaders. The Buds averted a tie for first place by shooting 1083 to the Falstaffs' 958 in the final game. For the evening therefore, Fazio's club had a net gain of one game on the hard-pressed Buds.

Replacement Lillard had a 180 in the second game and an even 200 in the final. Dick Weber was the only Budweiser who broke 600, shooting a 642 that included a 247 final.

Steve Nagy, who had appeared in only one game during the three previous matches with the Buds, paced his team to its 2-1 victory with a 661. Carl Richard had 631, Billy Welu 629, Harry Smith 584 and Fazio 569.

Fourth-place Authorized moved to within three games of the third-place Rabens with a 2-1 victory. Earl Sterling rolled 624 for Authorized.

Three-Game Shutout By Four-Pin Margin

The only B.P.A. Champions League match that resulted in a shutout last night was a remarkable affair in which the Cliff Antons took three games from the Willens by a total advantage of only four pins. In the opener, the Antons won, 937-935, then followed up with squeakers of 979-978 and 964-963.

John Branca was top man for the Antons with 662.

No record for closeness was involved, because A.B.C. Public Relations Director Bruce Pluckhahn said there have been several cases wherein teams have won three-game matches by margins of one pin each.

Only 3 District Prep Teams Unbeaten; Brentwood Halts Ladue

Lincoln, Beaumont Triumph

By Harold Tuthill

Then there were three. Like the fate of the 10 Little Indians, the number of undefeated prep basketball teams in the St. Louis district has dwindled until today there are only three left and one of them, Belleville Cathedral, plays Coyle tonight at Kirkwood High.

Beaumont, now 10-0, and East St. Louis Lincoln, 9-0, continued on their merry way last night but Ladue was upended by a Brentwood team that refused to quit even after it was tied midway in the fourth quarter. Ladue lost, 53-50, its first setback after five straight triumphs.

Everybody had a hand in the Eagle triumph as all six players used by Coach John Lauer contributed six or more points with a red-hot shooting percentage of .404 on 19 goals in 47 tries. Ladue hit 20 of 62 for .323 per cent.

Worse Than That.

"Were we that good?" Ladue coach Charley Cain said afterward. "From the number we missed I guessed it was worse than that."

Cain would not say that the long layoff from the Riverview Gardens game, Dec. 19, until the meeting with Brentwood had a bearing on the Rams' upset but high-scoring Andy Russell took 25 shots at the basket and made only six. He also canned a free throw for 13 of Ladue's points. The big gunner was John McCullough who collected most of his 19 points on tip-ins.

Ron Schindler's 17 were high for Brentwood, now 9-3 overall. Randy Niehoff had 10, Jerry Drieke and Art Toney seven apiece, and Don Eves and Gene Rudloff, six apiece.

Ladue opened with a 1-0 lead, but, except for the early stages when the game was tied four times, Brentwood was in front until two fourth-quarter goals by McCullough evened the count at 46-46 with 4:08 to play.

On Short End.

Here Niehoff and Toney contributed a free throw, two points that were matched by Doug Hamilton's goal. Rudloff's fielder was countered by a Russell goal, leaving Ladue on the short end of a 51-50 count with 2:10 on the clock. A goal by Toney in the last 55 seconds ended the scoring.

Beaumont made Mercy its tenth victim by a 83-46 score while Lincoln came from behind a 29-26 first half deficit to defeat Vashon, 69-58. Vashon coach Jodie Bailey is in the hospital recuperating from an appendectomy and the team was handled by Earl Beeks, the B team coach. Wilbert McAllister scored 30 points for Vashon.

Beaumont was the only Public High team to win. Cleveland dropped to 1-7 as it lost at Hancock, 51-49, boosting the host school to 8-1. Central was turned back at McBride, 81-64.

St. Louis U. High, defending Class L champion, opened the new year with a 58-46 decision over Ritenour. Moose Nordmann led the Junior Bills with 23 points.

In other non-league games involving county schools, Ferguson thumped Wellston, 65-53; Maplewood walloped Bayless, 75-43; Eureka edged out Pacific, 69-55; Pattonville shaded Riverview Gardens, 54 to 45 and Valley Park fell to 0-11 by losing to Troy, Mo., 60-35.

Catholic League Games.

Chaminade overcame an 18-17 first half deficit to beat St. Francis de Sales, 43-30, in one Catholic League engagement. In another Marquette nipped Duchesne, 57-52, after trailing at the intermission, 35-34.

Dupo beat Cahokia, 36-34, for its fifth Midwestern Conference triumph and its ninth victory in 10 games. Roxana climbed to 1-1 in the race with a 71-56 decision over Highland.

Troy gained its seventh M.B.C. conference triumph, scoring a 78-59 victory over Wesclin. Livingston beat Bunker Hill, 62-35; Venice turned back Worden, 72-53 and St. Paul of Highland trounced Aviston, 60-28, in other M.B.C. engagements.

In addition to the Cathedral (10-0) game at Coyle, DuBourg (10-2) hosts C.B.C. (10-1) and Maryland Heights entertains Fairview tonight.

Columbia (Ill.) High Wins 12th in Row

Columbia is the gem of the ocean as far as some Southern Illinois fans are concerned. Coach Elmer Hunter's undefeated Eagles registered their twelfth victory last night, beating Freeburg, 58-44, in a non-league high school basketball game.

Kentucky Stopped By Vandy; Wolfpack Scared by Virginia

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 7 (UPI)—Unranked Vanderbilt and an unsung but hot-shooting little Hoosier proved to be the undoing of previously unbeaten Kentucky.

It all happened here last night when Vanderbilt handed top-ranked Kentucky its first licking in 12 starts this season, 75-66, for possibly the biggest upset of the basketball campaign so far.

Jim Henry, a New Albany (Ind.) native who barely stretches six feet, was the man chiefly responsible for Kentucky's first loss since last Feb. 24.

Henry, whose chief hobby is tropical fish, also collects points and the 29 he came up with last night were enough to snap a Wildcat winning streak which had extended to 16 games over two seasons.

Quickly Fell Behind.

Kentucky, last year's N.C.A.A. champions, fell behind early, stayed ice cold throughout the first half and never was able to catch up. The inspired Commodores, who had won five games and lost five until last night, walked off the floor with a 41-27 lead at half-time and then came back to run up a 17-point lead in the second half.

Held in check by a man-to-man defense, the Wildcats rallied late in the second half to cut Vandy's margin to six points, 70-64, with three minutes to go, but the Commodores never let them get any closer.

Kentucky looked sluggish all night, connecting on only 23 of 81 shots for a sub-par 28.5 per cent average. Billy Lickert was the Wildcats' high scorer with 14 points.

The victory was only the thirteenth for Vanderbilt over Kentucky in their series which goes back to 1912. During that time, the Wildcats defeated the Commodores 55 times.

Second-ranked North Carolina State also suffered quite a scare before coming on to down Virginia, 73-68, for its tenth victory in 11 games.

Lost 10-Point Lead.

The Wolfpack blew a 10-point lead in the first half and the Cavaliers rallied again to go in front in the second half. But Bob MacGillivrey put North Carolina State ahead to stay, 55-53, with 7:58 remaining and Virginia never again came closer than two points.

By winning, the Wolfpack took over sole possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference, pushing idle North Carolina into second place.

Trailing by 19 points in the first half, Butler suddenly caught fire and came on to whip Notre Dame, 62-60. With Notre Dame leading 58-57 late in the game, Dick Haffner netted a jump shot that gave Butler a lead it never lost. The Irish played without their top scorer, Tom Hawkins, who was sidelined with a sprained ankle. Center Ken Pennington paced Butler with 20 points while John Tulley was high for Notre Dame with 18.

The S.M.U. Mustangs found themselves in a basketball game for 30 minutes but the Ponies closed with a rush against a taller Texas squad and won going away, 73-55, at Austin.

The Longhorns kept it close well into the second half, and even took a brief one-point lead. But the Mustangs' hustle and foul-line accuracy spelled out the Texas defeat.

Bobby James hit 30 points to lead S.M.U., while big Albert Almanza was high for Texas with 14. It was 38-36 in favor of S.M.U. at the half.

The Mustangs hit but 38.1 per cent of their field shots as compared with Texas's 42.9 per cent, but the Ponies were hot at the foul line, canning 89.3 per cent of their free throws while Texas was managing only 36.8 per cent.

ner of plays. He led F.S.U. to a 7-3 season last year, his sixth at Florida State.

The 45-year-old father of nine is eager to try his brand of football at the University of Maryland and Maryland officials are happy to have him.

"I am enthusiastic about the opportunity at Maryland," Nugent said yesterday after the Board of Regents announced his appointment. "The school has a great background and the future looks bright."

Nugent's over-all coaching record, including four years at Virginia Military Institute and six at F.S.U. is 53 wins, 45 losses and three ties.

Nugent's F.S.U. Seminoles lost, 14-6, to Oklahoma State in the Bluegrass Bowl at Louisville, Ky., Dec. 13, after knocking off Tennessee and Miami in running up their 7-3 record.

Nugent is expected to draw $15,000 annually at Maryland, plus fringe benefits.

Krulewitch, a New York attorney and a retired Marine Corps major general, thus automatically becomes a power in boxing.

Krulewitch was named yesterday by Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to fill a commission seat vacated by Francis J. Souhan of Seneca Falls. Souhan's term had expired. Rockefeller designated Krulewitch to the $16,900-a-year post as chairman.

U.S. AND CANADA REACH ACCORD ON TRADE TALKS

OTTAWA, Jan. 7 (AP) — The United States and Canada have agreed to consult more closely on issues that can hurt each other's trade. They also have called on Europe to speed up reduction of barriers to imports from North America.

Ending 24 hours of talks between cabinet members of the two neighbors, a 1500-word communique last night announced:

1. Wheat experts of the two countries will meet every three months in attempts to resolve Canadian complaints that subsidized disposal of American surplus wheat cuts into Canada's commercial markets.

2. More talks will take place on United States restrictions on import of Canadian oil. There was joint agreement that continued oil exploration and development are necessary on defense grounds.

Lead and Zinc Curbs.

3. The United States expressed hope it could withdraw its import curbs on lead and zinc once some international agreement is reached among major suppliers and buyers. The curbs were imposed last September. An international study now is under way.

4. Cabinet spokesmen, probably Canadian Justice Minister E. D. Fulton and United States Attorney General William Rogers, will hold talks on United States prosecution of three big electronic companies whose subsidiaries operate a patent pool in Canada. Canada wants the suit dropped. The United States said it has no intention of infringing on Canadian sovereignty.

5. Canada agreed to consult with the United States before it applies its new anti-dumping laws, which the Americans claim violate Canada's international trade obligations. Canada gave assurances it does not intend to use the legislation in a discriminatory or arbitrary manner.

6. Canada also will consult on the impact of recent Canadian food import curbs, particularly on turkeys and frozen peas. Most of the curbs are linked with United States price support programs.

7. Canada will study a United States proposal to set up an International Development Association affiliated with the World Bank. The association would provide under-developed countries with long-term loans on more generous terms than the World Bank gives.

European Markets.

The two delegations agreed that recent European currency convertibility moves should be followed by other steps to open more European markets for North American exporters.

The ministers said:

"Convertibility has removed the financial justification for discriminating against dollar suppliers and should be followed by further moves by the countries concerned to provide non-discriminatory access to their markets for goods from the United States, Canada and other countries."

Specifically they want Europe to speed up elimination of import curbs against North American goods.

The United States was represented by Treasury Secretary Robert Anderson, Interior Secretary Fred Seaton, Commerce Secretary Lewis Strauss and Under Secretary of State Douglas Dillon, representing ailing Secretary Dulles.

1958 SCHOOL ACT PRAISED BY JESUIT COLLEGE HEADS

The basic principles upon which the National Defense Education Act of 1958 was based have been commended by presidents of 28 Jesuit colleges and universities in the United States at a meeting in Kansas City, it was announced today. In attendance was the Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S.J. of St. Louis University.

Some of these principles, the Jesuit college presidents said, are that the best interests of the nation require "the fullest development of mental resources and technical skills of young men and women, additional and more adequate educational opportunities be made available and that efforts must be increased to identify and educate more of the talent of the nation."

The group praised in particular the educational aims of the act. The presidents also expressed confidence that the new Congress will further the work of its predecessor "by promptly voting the full appropriations authorized in the act and by modifying those few provisions which are discriminatory."

ALASKA GOV. EGAN RESTING WELL AFTER OPERATION

JUNEAU, Jan. 7 (AP)—Gov. William A. Egan, who has spent most of his time as Governor of this new state in the hospital, was resting comfortably today after undergoing surgery.

Egan was inaugurated as the first Governor of the new state of Alaska last Saturday. Four hours after the ceremony he entered the hospital.

Yesterday surgeons removed his gall bladder and a gall stone. They termed the operation a complete success and said Egan was in good condition. Doctors indicated it would be two weeks before he could take over all of the duties of Governor.

Truman to Let Democrats Use Birthday for Fund-Raising Show

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —Former President Harry S. Truman has agreed to make his seventy-fifth birthday, May 8, the occasion for a nation-wide party fund-raising show, the Democratic National Committee said yesterday.

Details of the program remain to be worked out, but committee officials said it probably would take the form of a closed circuit telecast over a theater or hotel ballroom network.

"It would be a tribute to Mr. Truman with the former President participating," deputy chairman Sam Brightman said.

Truman is in Washington for the swearing in at the Capitol today of some of the Senators and Representatives he spoke for in the last Democratic campaign, which took him to more than 30 states.

Associates said the former President had no plans to announce any time soon his choice for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960. They added, however, they would not be surprised if he came out for his home state Senator, Stuart Symington, before the convention.

The last indication of how Truman felt toward his fellow Missourian was given in a pre-election speech last Nov. 1 in St. Louis. The former President said then:

"It is important to re-elect him (Symington) by a tremendous margin so that people all over the country will know how much we think of him."

Symington, who was Secretary of the Air Force under Truman, won re-election by a whopping margin.

MINOR POINTS BLOCK ACCORD IN AIR STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UPI) —Differences on minor items today blocked settlement of a pilot's strike against American Airlines.

Leverett Edwards, chairman of the National Mediation Board, gave this appraisal of the negotiations yesterday as the strike by the Airline Pilots Association began its nineteenth day.

Union and company officials declined to comment.

Reservation and ticket agents made idle by the pilot's strike picketed the building where negotiations were under way. The employes, including several women, carried placards pleading with the pilots to return to work.

One sign read: "Pilots, I can live on $400 a month. You can try to work for $2000 a month."

Another said: "Pilots, don't kill the goose that laid the golden egg. American Airlines is losing money. Go back to work."

About 20,000 American employes were furloughed by the company this week for the duration of the strike. The pilots walked out Dec. 19 in support of their demand for wage boosts.

WORKMAN BURIED BY CAVE-IN SAVED AFTER 12 HOURS

BAKERSFIELD, Calif., Jan. 7 (AP) — A workman trapped for more than 12 hours in a collapsed cesspool was rescued today. For four hours he had been buried and when colleagues finally reached him, expecting to find him dead, they found him still alive. A piece of the casing that had collapsed shielded his head and gave him a space in which to breathe.

After he was partly free it was found that a metal plate had pinned his foot at the bottom of the 24-foot hole. No one else could reach him in the close quarters, because of the danger of shifting sand.

He himself had to do the work of freeing his foot, banging away with a chisel and breaking blade after blade on a power saw.

Finally a heavy crane was backed into position and a hook lowered to the trapped man. He fastened it to the metal and the crane hoisted it far enough for him to pull his foot out.

He was rushed to a hospital where his condition was described as excellent.

UPHOLDS CONNECTICUT'S ANTI-BIRTH CONTROL LAW

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 7 —Connecticut's 79-year-old law barring the teaching of birth control or the use of contraceptives was upheld yesterday by Judge Frank T. Healey in the state's Superior Court.

Judge Healey affirmed that previous decisions by the state's highest tribunal, the Supreme Court of Errors, made it impossible for him to do anything but uphold that court's decision.

The complaint against the state law was brought by five parties, among them Dr. C. Lee Buston, head of the Yale Medical School's obstetrics department. The other plaintiffs were three couples and a housewife who claimed a further pregnancy might result in her death.

An appeal from Judge Healey's ruling is expected to be brought before the Supreme Court of Errors. If it is rejected, the plaintiffs will be at liberty to bring their complaint before federal courts.

NORMAN J. GEORGE HEADS GLENNON HOSPITAL BOARD

Norman J. George, treasurer of P. D. George Co., a paint concern, was elected president of the board of governors of Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital for Children last night. He succeeds George W. S. Way Jr., who has held the office for two years.

Others elected are: S. C. Sachs, vice president; Walter J. Creely, treasurer, and Bernard J. Huger, secretary. Re-elected to the board were John P. Butler, Frank C. Blumeyer, George H. Capps, Oliver Gutman, Edward D. Jones, Edward F. Judge, Richard C. Muckerman and Joseph L. Werner.

George was vice chairman of the special gifts division in the original drive to raise money to build the hospital, which is at Grand boulevard and Park avenue. He was director of the Community Chest campaign in 1953.

SEC CITES INCREASE IN CONFIDENCE MEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) —Heightened interest in the stock market has attracted a fringe element of confidence men who cater to the public's get-rich-quick fancies, Congress was told today.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, in its report for the 1958 fiscal year which ended June 30, said the big bull market had saddled it with "enforcement problems of the first magnitude."

Confidence men were said to be preying on "uninformed investors . . . often willing to purchase unknown and speculative securities which are represented as offering unusual opportunities for gain."

The SEC observed that "somewhat paradoxically, declines in the prices of seasoned securities may increase the public appetite for such speculative offerings."

It said a substantial number of recent mergers, acquisitions and expansion programs "appear to be designed largely to reap profits for promoters and speculators at the expense of the public."

As the tempo of market activity has increased, the commission said, it has "noted a growing number of instances of unusual and unexplained market activities in particular securities, suggesting possible market manipulations." It said it expects to devote more of its enforcement effort to this area in the future.

The commission said that as opportunities for illicit profits have multiplied, "the number, resources and ingenuity of violators seeking to capitalize upon these opportunities have likewise multiplied."

In fiscal 1958, SEC reported, the dollar amount of new securities for which registration statements were filed with the commission reached the new high of nearly 17 billion dollars. The report said this compared with less than 15 billion in fiscal 1957 and 7½ billion in fiscal 1953.

It said the aggregate market value of all stocks on all exchanges was 258 billion dollars last June 30—down 4 billion from a year earlier. The volume of exchange trading in securities topped 32 billion dollars in fiscal 1958, the SEC said.

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE, FAMILY'S FOURTH DISASTER

BEACON FALLS, Conn., Jan. 7 (AP)—Three times disaster has struck the home of Albert Borgnis. Two times he rebuilt it. Yesterday Borgnis, his wife and three children were homeless again after a fire destroyed their small home.

Fire officials said a space heater exploded, causing $9000 damage. Borgnis said he had no insurance.

In 1953 fire caused $1600 damage, forcing the family to move out until repairs could be made. In 1955 flood water rose within two feet of the upstairs bedroom ceilings. Damage was estimated at well over $11,000.

He was still paying for the furniture lost in the floods and living in a rented house until his flood-damaged home could be repaired, when a fire in 1956 caused $600 damage.

ADENAUER FOES CRITICIZE REJECTION OF SOVIET NOTE

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

BONN, Jan. 7—West Germany's stiff rejection of Russia's Berlin ultimatum was criticized yesterday by opponents of Chancellor Adenauer as doing nothing to further the cause of German reunification.

Herbert Wehner, a top figure in the powerful opposition Social Democratic party and a bitter foe of Adenauer, said the German note, sent to Moscow Monday, was "just an echo" of the Western Big Three's replies. His view was echoed by leading independent newspapers.

Many critics of Adenauer's policy would welcome an offer by the West German government to the Russians to negotiate West German withdrawal from NATO in return for Soviet concessions on German reunification.

CARTOGRAPHY GRADUATES

By special arrangement with the Civil Service Commission, completion of the course carries automatic promotion. The six-month course was inaugurated to fill requirements for cartographers at the chart center.

TIGHTER LAW TO BAR SUNDAY SALES URGED

The state law prohibiting retail selling on Sunday is inadequate, particularly in regard to its penalties, St. Louis county officials said today.

They spoke at a meeting attended by a large number of county merchants who complained that many stores and discount houses were staying open on Sunday, causing unfair competition.

Raymond W. Hensley, superintendent of the county police, and Norman Anderson, prosecuting attorney, pointed out that the state law has a $50 fine as a maximum penalty.

The law needs teeth in it to bt enforceable, Hensley said. Anderson and William Gallagher, county counselor, also stated that the definition of what can be sold on Sunday, under state law, requires clarification. They said the word "necessities," as set out in the law, is vague.

James H. J. McNary, county supervisor, and Gallagher stressed the necessity of having uniform laws in the various county municipalities governing Sunday sales. These laws should conform with county and state statutes, they said.

Irving Shapiro, manager of the Katz Drug Store in Pine Lawn, who is also chairman of the Pine Lawn Chamber of Commerce, disagreed with the position taken by merchants opposing Sunday sales.

"It's surprising to me that a group of successful business men are hiding behind the Sunday closing law to avoid competition," he stated. He urged them to "get out and be more competitive."

The meeting, held at a cafeteria at 6107 Theodosia avenue, was sponsored by the Wellston Chamber of Commerce. It was attended by about 100 persons, including representatives of Chammbers of Commerce throughout the county and clergymen.

PHONE BUILDING EXPLOSION IN CALIFORNIA UNEXPLAINED

ROSEVILLE, Calif., Jan. 7 (UPI)—Fire officials were at a loss today to explain what caused an explosion that shattered a Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company repeater station, interrupting some transcontinental communications for an hour.

The blast took place yesterday at 11:45 a.m. The entire building, constructed of insulated rock wall and brick was scattered hundreds of feet. Windows and light fixtures in nearby homes were shattered.

United Press International teletype communications to California newspapers and radio stations, stock market quotations from New York, leased teleprinter circuits of several major business firms, and some Air Force communications lines were affected for an hour or two.

CITIZENS GROUP INDORSES OVERLAND HOME RULE PLAN

The proposed Home Rule Charter, which will be submitted to voters in Overland Feb. 5, has been indorsed by members of the former Citizens Committee for Progress in the municipality, it was announced today.

The citizens committee, which was formed by Overland June 25, 1956, recommended that the city frame and adopt its own charter under the state constitution. A 13-member Charter Commission approved a proposed charter with a council - mayor - administrator plan Dec. 15.

The proposed charter provides for an elected board of aldermen, representative by wards; a city administrator, whose duties parallel those of a city manager, and a mayor, who would be granted specific powers and duties.

KANSAS U. HEAD CITES RED PROFESSORS' STATUS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 7 (AP)—A university professor's pay and prestige in Russia is more than that of one in the United States, the opening session of the forty-fifth annual conference of the Association of American Colleges was told last night.

Dr. Franklin D. Murphy, University of Kansas chancellor who visited Russia in July, said a senior full professor there gets the equivalent of $3000 a month.

"But a far more meaningfull evaluation is a comparison of the economic status within the Soviet Union," Murphy said. "In general, the Soviet professor receives more than the industrial manager, and in many instances very much more. He receives about six times the pay of a laborer. In the United States, on the other hand, the average pay of our professors is about twice that of a laborer."

ACTING HEALTH HEAD NAMED IN COUNTY

Dr. John C. Murphy, director of the chronic disease control section of the St. Louis County Health Department, was appointed acting health commissioner of the county yesterday. The appointment was announced by County Supervisor James H. J. McNary.

Dr. Murphy will serve as acting health commissioner until the job is filled by permanent appointment. The vacancy was created by the resignation of Dr. Herbert L. Domke to become director of the Pittsburgh-Allegheny County (Pa.) Health Department.

In his new post, Dr. Murphy will receive the same salary as that paid to Dr. Domke, $14,508 a year. As director of the chronic disease control section he received $12,528.

The job of Health Commissioner is a civil service position. The county civil service commission is presently screening applicants for the permanent appointment, and will recommend three, from whom McNary is to select one.

McNary also announced appointment of G. Joseph Neaf, son of former St. Louis County Assessor Martin L. Neaf, as public administrator. Neaf is 28 years old, a graduate of the St. Louis University Law School, and has been employed since 1957 as a clerk in the county probate court.

He succeeds Edward A. Walsh, who had two years left in his term as public administrator when he was elected county clerk at last November's election.

Ice Age

ulated, but during the I.G.Y. such a feature was actually detected near the coast of the Weddell sea. Its bottom averaged 3500 feet below sea level.

At the opposite end of the supposed trough the ocean floor dipped beneath the floating Ross Ice shelf to a point 48 miles south of Mount Discovery, where it was 4400 feet below sea level. In the heart of Marie Byrd Land, midway between the two seas, it was found that the terrain dropped lower between Byrd Station and the mountains to the south.

The ice depths recorded by the many Antarctic trail parties indicated that there was about 40 per cent more ice in the world than had been supposed. It was enough to cover the entire earth to a depth of 100 feet.

There was some evidence of ice shrinkage. More than 1000 square miles of Lady Newnes ice shelf had vanished since 1912. P. Shumsky, head of ice studies of the Soviet expedition, reported that the ice sheet surrounding Mount Gauss has dropped an average of 26 feet in the 55 years since the Germans surveyed it. The peak lies close ot the main Soviet base at Mirny.

Survey of Glaciers.

On the other hand a survey of glaciers in the largely ice-free valleys near McMurdo sound, carried out by Dr. Troy Pewe of the University of Alaska, indicated no change in 45 years. It was found that snowfall in Antarctica is surprisingly meager and melting almost non-existent. Hence any changes in the ice volume would be very gradual.

There was evidence that the climate in Antarctica had warmed, though not at the pace observable in the Atlantic sector of the Arctic. The average temperature at Little America was up five degrees since 1911. The temperature of the ice in a shaft sunk more than 1000 feet into the ice sheet of Marie Byrd land dropped two degrees from near the surface to the bottom. This presumably reflected a colder climate 1000 years ago.

Numerous expeditions were stationed on glaciers between the two polar regions. They ranged from Mount Olympus in the state of Washington to Brooks range of Alaska, the Suntar-Khayata mountains of Siberia, the Pamirs north of Afghanistan and even remote Franz Joseph land in the Arctic ocean, where two girls of a Soviet party worked in a laboratory carved out of the glacier itself.

When the I. G. Y. ended, the basic questions with regard to the ice ages still had not been answered. It was not expected that they would be. Yet it seemed possible that the necessary information needed to supply the answers was in hand. It would have to be digested by business machines and studied by scientists in many fields.

Meanwhile more clues are being sought, so that sooner or later it seems likely that we shall know whether future generations will have to migrate southward, in flight from advancing ice, or inland in flight from rising oceans, swollen by the melting of present-day ice sheets.

Reston

Organization talks last month, or to Ottawa for the economic talks this week, or to Pakistan for the Baghdad pact meetings later this month. But he committed himself anyway.

He is up every morning before seven memorizing the latest Soviet insults in the morning papers. He gets to the State Department before the place is properly swept out. He has, in Christian A. Herter, C. Douglas Dillon, Robert Murphy and Livingston Merehant, four experienced and competent deputies, but he keeps a hand in everything, and it almost takes a presidential proclamation to keep him off the telephone even when he is in the hospital.

Odd and Unbalanced System.

This system of formulating everything, negotiating everything, and writing everything on his big yellow pad is apparently necessary to his own inner compulsions, whatever they are, but it leads him to work when he should be taking it easy and it creates an odd and unbalanced system in the top direction of the nation's foreign policy.

For the President is often not working on foreign policy when he should be, and Dulles is often working on it when he shouldn't be. And this naturally raises the question of what is to be done if the Secretary, as now seems likely, must begin to conserve his energies.

Either his working system must be changed or his physical system will be put in jeopardy. A Democratic Congress is just beginning what promises to be one long investigation of foreign policy questions that will probably last from now until the 1960 election. This will be no rest-cure for the Secretary.

Also, it is already clear from the visit of the Soviet Deputy Prime Minister, Anastas Mikoyan, that the Communists are on the verge of another lively period of negotiation in an effort to block the nuclear rearmament of West Germany, and, if possible, to demilitarize, neutralize and federate the whole of that country.

Urging a Conference.

Mikoyan is already talking about the possibility of a foreign ministers meeting on a variety of topics or a summit meeting, either of which would require a prodigious amount of preparation and an enormous expenditure of energy.

Dulles went to his office Monday morning despite his virus infection, feeling that Mikoyan merely wanted to pay a courtesy call. Instead the First Deputy Prime Minister stayed for 95 minutes and, by taking up a flexible and even friendly attitude, indicated that he wanted to get down to such basic world questions as the future of Berlin, the security of Europe, the questions of disarmament and surprise attack, and world trade.

In the middle of the session, Assistant Secretary Merchant had to run off to Ottawa, but Dulles, who had earlier endured a long briefing session with the congressional leaders at the White House, had to sit it out, and then go home to bed. Even then he was on the phone reporting to the White House on his talks with the Soviet visitor, and yesterday he worked on official papers in bed.

Constant Attention.

Fortunately, Dulles himself knows better than anybody else how much the formulation and direction of foreign policy depends on him, and how much his system at the State Department depends on his constant personal attention.

Whether he will delegate some of his work load to others, however, remains to be seen. When he was appointed Secretary of State in 1952, he was fond of musing out loud about the best way to conduct foreign policy under the presidential system, and in those far-off days, he used to say that perhaps the best way was to have him move into the White House and concentrate on being the President's foreign policy adviser, free of the administration of the State Department and of constant appearances on Capitol Hill.

He did not put this theory to the test, however, and it is unlikely now that he would willingly leave the first Cabinet post unless the President insisted, which he is not likely to do.

range of 400 miles. To reach 1800 miles, the T-1 is put on top of a rocket engine of 268,000 pounds of thrust. This missile is known as the T-2.

To reach 5000 miles, the T-2 combination is put on top of a third and still more powerful rocket of about 500,000 pounds of thrust. A still larger rocket of an estimated 800,000 pounds of thrust, available as a first stage in combination with the T-2, can place very large payloads into space and obtain ranges up to 8500 miles.

The T-4, with a range of 1000 miles, uses two stages of about 170,000 pounds of thrust and 53,000 pounds of thrust.

There is also a family of solid propellant missiles. The largest is reported to have 99,000 pounds of thrust and is used to propel the Soviet submarine-launched Comet II to a range of about 750 miles.

U.S. Lets Contract.

Glennan has announced that a contract has been let to develop a rocket booster with a thrust of between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 pounds. This, however, will take from four to six years to develop. This rocket is designed to have enough power to carry a man into space.

The Titan intercontinental missile follows the Soviet practice to a degree. It uses two stages, the first of a reported 300,000 pounds of thrust and the second of a reported 60,000 pounds of thrust. The total thrust is thus about the same as the Atlas and about one-half that of the Soviet T-3. The payload will be about one-quarter of that of the T-3.

It is expected that at least 18 months will elapse before these rockets can be tested and used with some reliability in combination with other stages for space exploration.

The solid-propellant Minuteman, being developed for the Air Force, will follow Soviet practice and have three stages. The second stage is expected to be the first stage of the Polaris, with the third stage yet to be developed or selected, possibly using the Army's Sergeant solid-propellant rocket.

Looking at these realities of the position of the United States in rocket development, it is apparent that, compared with the Soviet position, the United States cannot hope for some years to put into orbit payloads that compare to those already launched by the Soviet Union. A second stage can be put on the Atlas to increase its payload, but the combination will still be short of the Soviet capability and reliability.

NAVY CUTS BACK ITS GOAL FOR NEW CARRIERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Navy has reduced its goal of 15 modern aircraft carriers by 1963. The reasons: [illegible] airplane designs and less money.

A fleet of 12 carriers is the revised new target. The old goal called for a new carrier every year. Now the aim is every two years to meet the reduced 1963 goal.

A request for quick construction of nuclear carriers also is said to result in the cut-back. Funds for starting work on the nuclear enterprise, the world's first nuclear-powered carrier, were forced by Congress to postpone starting a second one last year. This year may bring another postponement.

Budget limitations appear to be the main reason for the change in plans. Navy officials also point to different concepts of design.

Future naval aviation will utilize smaller, lighter planes to handle new nuclear weapons, which are lighter and more compact than when the Navy originally planned its 1963 fleet.

Smaller planes may end the recent trend of making carriers bigger. The old Essex and Midway class carriers had runways averaging about 520 feet. The present Forrestal class uses a 717-foot runway. The nuclear enterprise will have a 753-foot runway. Some Navy officials say, with planes growing lighter, there is no need to make future carrier runways any longer.

This year's program probably will include construction of a Forrestal class carrier, a conventionally propelled ship that would cost about $100,000,000 less than a nuclear ship.

The Navy apparently is willing to settle for a conventional ship in 1959 because there is an urgent need to replace carriers becoming too old for efficient work. This was emphasized, officials say, in last year's Formosa and Middle East crises.

VETERAN OF LUFTWAFFE REGAINS U.S. CITIZENSHIP

PATTERSON, N.J., Jan. 7 (UPI)—An American-born airman who served in the German Luftwaffe in World War II has regained his United States citizenship.

Karl Heinz Schulle, who was shot down and taken prisoner, swore allegiance to the United States yesterday as he and his wife, Waltraud, became American citizens, at naturalization ceremonies.

Schulle was born in Los Angeles of German parents, who returned to Germany with him when he was 10. Schulle married in 1948 and returned to the United States with his wife in 1953. He works as a machinist here.

BARBER FINDS MIKOYAN 'KIND, GENTLE MAN'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Alfonso Tana, 70-year-old hotel barber, stopped by the Soviet Embassy today—for the third straight day—to give visiting Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan his morning shave.

Tana said Mikoyan was "a very nice fellow, a kind and gentle man." He said there was little conversation.

"We just say 'Good morning' and then, when I'm finished, 'Good day,'" Tana said. "Then Mr. Mikoyan thanks me and bows."

Tana refused to say whether Mikoyan paid him for the shaves or gave him a tip for his services.

"Those are money matters that I just won't discuss," he said.

Asked how he happened to be tapped for the job, he replied:

"Someone at the State Department asked me to do it. Somebody must have recommended me."

Hungary, Iraq Sign Pact.

BAGHDAD, Jan. 7 (UPI)—Iraq signed a trade agreement with Hungary yesterday, bringing to eight the number of commercial accords the Baghdad revolutionary regime has concluded with Communist countries since the July 14 uprising.

RAW MATERIALS OUTPUT CLIMBED IN RUSSIA IN 1958

By THOMAS P. WHITNEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Soviet Union scored substantial gains last year in the production of basic materials, figures released by the Soviet Government indicate. Production plans were overfulfilled in ferrous metals, coal, petroleum and electric power.

Thise is the report from Moscow:

In 1958 Soviet steel production reached 55,000,000 metric tons (a metric ton is 2205 pounds). The gain over 1957 was 3,800,000 tons—more than 1,000,000 tons better than the production plan announced in December 1957 by economic planning chief Joseph Kuzmin. By comparision, United States steel output in 1957 was 102,000,000 metric tons.

Backing up the steel output was Soviet production in 1958 of 39,600,000 metric tons of pog iron. This represented an increase over 1957 of 2,600,000 tons, or 500,000 tons better than plan. United States pig iron production in 1957 was 72,000,000 metric tons.

Coal output of 498,000,000 metric tons was almost 35,000,000 better than in 1957 and 8,000,000 better than the goal. United States output of coal in 1957 was 467,000,000 metric tons. However, Soviet figures include large amounts of low-grade coal, while American production contains little of this sort.

Soviet petroleum production rose by 15,200,000 metric tons in 1958 to reach 113,500,000 tons compared with 98,300,000 in 1957. This was 1,500,000 tons better than plan. American oil output in 1957 was 354,000,000 tons.

Soviet electric power production in 1958 reached 233,600,000,000 kilowatt hours. This was 23,900,000,000 more than in 1957 and 2,600,000,000 better than plan. The United States in 1957 produced 716 billion kilowatt hours.

Comparison of Soviet production in 1958 with United States in 1958 would show the Soviet Union gaining rapidly on the United States — more because of United States output declines than because of Soviet Gains, though the latter were appreciable in all fields.

The fact is that while the United States stands still or recedes in production of important items, the Soviet Union surges forward steadily each year.

Yielding to Winter

Aerial view is of section of Chain of Rocks canal where dredge in foreground withdraws after a losing battle with ice yesterday. Packed solidly, ice was drifting downstream in wake of cold wave which moved through the Middle West last weekend. River traffic was disrupted but not halted by the heavy flow.

Neighborhood Blaze

Lone volunteer struggles with table removed from one of three houses burning at Vorheesville, N.Y., yesterday. Flames were swept rapidly from one house to another by stiff winds and firemen, handicapped also by a shortage of water, were unable to save any of the dwellings.

Riverfront Discussion

Panels of photographs form background and basis for talk being delivered by architect Eero Saarinen at meeting of officials interested in development of Jefferson National Expansion Memorial yesterday. Pictures are of areas adjoining the memorial site on the riverfront. Saarinen, architect of the project, pointed out that redevelopment of the adjoining properties along harmonious lines would enhance the value of the memorial as a beauty spot.

Grown-up Thought On 'The Rifleman'

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.

IN LAST WEEK'S "THE RIFLEMAN," one of the better Westerns to come along this season, a family of Argentines move into the community populated by the McCains and run headlong into "senseless prejudice" of the other ranchers.

JOHN CROSBY

However, Lucas McCain (Chuck Connors) preaches tolerance to his young son Mark (Johnny Crawford), makes him stop calling the visitors "pepperguts" and ride the range with Argentine's not-quite-so-young son Maneulo. So far it follows the script of all tolerance dramas. But then the old story line veers sharply in a new and interesting direction. Manuelo turns out to be an Argentine hood who kills his sister's suitor and then, accidentally, kills himself.

The boy is heartbroken and he sobs to his father: "You said people who are different are good."

Says the Rifleman: "I didn't explain it so good. There are good ones and bad ones. I know that's an awful grown-up thought for a 10-year-old but I want you to try and understand."

As a matter of fact, that's an awfully grown-up thought for the rest of us, too. In any of these tolerance dramas the outsiders—whether they be Negroes or Japanese or whatever—are persecuted by the insiders until one of the outsiders rescues the son of one of the insiders from certain death. Then the insiders shamefacedly admit that the outsiders are a pretty good sort after all. The idea that an outsider could be anything but a prince of good fellows is heresy. For a score of years now, the only permissible villains have been white Protestants of Anglo-Saxon stock. During the war, of course, we could also sneer at Germans and Japanese and since the war it's been open season on the Russians. Mostly though, the bad guys are simply ourselves. Everyone else has a pressure group.

The most sacrosanct of outers are, of course, human beings whose skin is anything but white. Brown, yellow or black-skinned folk are automatically virtuous—or, if there is a fall from virtue, there are strongly extenuating circumstances, usually intolerable social pressures. The result is that writers are forced to be fundamentally dishonest in their perceptions of people of any other color or creed than white and Protestant.

This pressure is so intolerable to writers that they don't write about black or brown-skinned people. Or, at any rate, they don't write very interestingly. Coming out pretty soon is Sam Goldwyn's movie "Porgy and Bess" which contains a mighty interesting and wicked black man named Sportin' Life. But Du Bose Hayward wrote "Porgy" more than 30 years ago. I have grave doubts that, pressures being as they are, he would write it just like that today. I'm absolutely convinced that Shakespeare could never bring out "Othello" as a new work today.

An excellent example of a Negro character written under modern conditions with the N.A.A.C.P. breathing down the writer's back is Sidney Poitier in "The Defiant Ones." Tony Curtis must shoulder the villainy alone in that picture. Not that there's anything the matter with that as an individual case. But as a matter of general rule, it's dishonest.

I think if I were in the N.A.A.C.P. or in any other such group, I'd be happier if my race or creed were simply represented in all honesty as people, not as plaster saints. Because otherwise they'll be neglected altogether. Not so long ago Sammy Davis Jr. was wailing that he couldn't get a part in pictures. Well, there aren't many parts. Sportin' Life, which he'll play in "Porgy and Bess," was written a long time ago and nobody's doing that sort of thing any more.

"Rifleman" ranks No. 4 in the Neilsen ratings, highest of the new shows this season. As Westerns go, it's one of the more intelligent ones and I'm happy that it restores the rifle to a position of some importance in the armory of the old frontier.

Paying for Chores

"HOW MUCH will you give me?" asked 11-year-old Agnes. Thereupon she began bargaining with her mother who had asked her to lend a hand with the week's ironing.

"It's not enough," she said, though Mother had raised the figure twice in response to her insistence that it was worth more. "I'll only do the napkins and handkerchiefs for that much," she said.

We wondered how long the bargaining would go on. It came to an abrupt end with Mother's exasperated, "Take it or leave it." The girl took it and went to work in a halfhearted don't-care sort of way.

In talking about it later the Mother said, "I'd do differently about paying her if I had it to do over. We began paying her for chores when she was 4. We thought it was a good way to have her earn her allowance. But it isn't. She doesn't want to do a thing unless she's paid for it. She's getting worse about it. She is always trying to raise the ante."

Over and over again parents bring up the pros and cons of this question of paying a child for doing home chores. There are many questions of paying a child for doing home chores. There are many angles to the matter. On the side of paying lie the arguments that it gives the youngsters the idea of earning; that it associates the getting of money with the doing of work; that it makes the work seem important; that it makes the child put forth effort for what he gets.

The father of an 8-year-old said, "Right from the start we have set up the idea that you don't get something for nothing. No work, no pay." We asked, "What happens if he decides he prefers the no work?"

"That has happened," said the father. "Sometimes he gets away with it and other times he has to do the work anyway." We couldn't help but wonder whether that quite makes sense to the youngster.

The father of a 10-year-old cited this very thing as his reason for not believing in payment for chores. He said, "If I put it on that basis then I've got nothing to say if they decide not to work." He has a point.

The decision as to whether or not to pay for chores is for the parents in each home to decide. The answer depends largely on the feeling one wants the child to have about his part in home affairs. If one wants the feeling of individual responsibility as one of the family, it tips the scale toward doing things because they need to be done, and not for pay. This is not to say that the feeling of being a part of the family never comes when chores are paid for. It may, but the odds are too favorable.

THE WINTER VACATION-ist will welcome the fashion for knitted apparel that is prominently featured in the resort collections of the St. Louis stores. Sometimes the entire costume is knitted, and this trend applies to dress and jacket ensembles as well as to two-piece and one-piece dresses. Sweater modes are especially popular, and the silk or linen dress which has its jacket made of wool jersey is among the most attractive styles on display. Illustrated are four models, typical of the trend.

1—This new version of the coat and dress ensemble made of imported Italian wool knit has tailored details of distinction. Raglan shoulders with their full-fashioned shaping are particularly noteworthy. The one-piece dress has short sleeves, a simple rounded neckline and an elasticized waistline. The full-length coat which will be worn with many different dresses has long sleeves, flap pockets and a tailored collar. Shades include turquoise, navy blue and natural. Sizes range from 8 to 16.

2—An inexpensive dress that packs easily and will be a year-around asset to a wardrobe is made of striped cotton knit. Many of the new fashion points are apparent in its design. For example, the collar is wide and sets away from the neckline. Shoulders are elongated for that width at the top, characteristic of many of the 1959 silhouettes. The dress buttons, shirt-waist fashion, from neckline to hipline. The waistline is elasticized. Sleeves are three-quarter length. The contour belt is of leather. Shades include navy and white, red and white and black and white in misses sizes.

3—One of the most handsome dresses in the knitted category is made of cashmere. The skirt is completely lined with crepe so that it will keep its shape indefinitely. The dress has been knitted like a sweater with a ribbed section at the sleeve edge and the elasticized waistline. A collar that ties also features ribbing. Shades of light blue, royal blue, kelly green and cherry red are available in misses sizes. There is another cashmere dress in the same shades which has a double-breasted blouse.

4—A slubbed silk dress, warp-printed in a flower design, adds a wool jersey jacket. Soft shades of which Dresden blue predominates are emphasized in the silk. The jacket, lined with the print, repeats the dominant blue tone. The dress has a fitted silhouette with the natural waistline. Sleeves are short. The wide neckline has a flattering cowl-draped collar extending over the top of the shoulders. The collarless jacket is waist length.

Bridge Deck

GIL BALKAM of West Islip, N.Y., sends us today's grand slam at spades, which was a puzzler to the players who met it at the recent Long Beach mixed pair event. When life master Hank Moss was declarer, he ruffed three diamonds in dummy (North) for a total of 12 tricks; six spades, one heart, one diamond, three diamond ruffs and one club. He tried for this thirteenth trick on a squeeze, but with West guarding clubs and East guarding hearts, there was no squeeze.

At the end of the play the kibitzers analyzed the hand and found a double-dummy solution for 13 tricks. Study all four hands, then decide how you would make all the tricks after the club king is led.

	♠K10865 ♥Q105 ♦— ♣A9854
	♠AJ9742 ♥A96 ♦AQ78 ♣—

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
7♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

ANSWER

South makes his grand slam by a transferred squeeze. By ruffing out clubs instead of diamonds, he again has 12 quick tricks; four spades and a diamond ruff in North, one heart, one diamond, one club and four club ruffs. By leading the queen of diamonds and ruffing West's king, he transfers the task of guarding diamonds from West to East. Now East can be squeezed in hearts and diamonds for seven-odd.

Declarer takes the club king with the ace, discarding a heart, ruffs a club, draws trumps, ruffs another club, ruffs a diamond and again ruffs a club. He cashes the diamond ace, discarding a heart from North, leads the diamond queen, ruffing West's king, and ruffs the last club. He re-enters dummy with a spade lead, leaving this situation:

	♠10 ♥Q10 ♦— ♣—
♠— ♥74 ♦5 ♣—	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠— ♥KJ ♦J ♣—
	♠— ♥A9 ♦7 ♣—

Now the lead of the spade ten squeezes East, giving declarer the rest of the tricks. Note that a heart opening lead would kill the transferred squeeze by immediately removing South's vital ace entry.

Delights of a Visiting Aunt

By Adele Starbird

ADELE STARBIRD

AFTER THE CLERK had gone to look for my size in shoes, I picked up the shoe he had removed and placed it on the chair beside me.

"I see that you have a dog," he said when he returned.

"I used to have a dog. But how did you know?"

"People with dogs always put their shoes up. It's a habit."

A very good habit, but one which unfortunately I have permitted to lapse. Last week while I was a house guest in Kirkwood, the young setter operated very efficiently on some slippers I had placed beside the bed.

Speaking of shoes reminds me of a fitter who admired the low-heeled pumps I was wearing. I told her they were called "Paradise Kittens" and were designed here in St. Louis. When she gathered up her things to leave, she said, "Now what is the name of those shoes? Did you say 'Heavenly Cats'?" Those kittens grew up fast.

In pioneer days unattached females, whether spinsters or widows, spent their lives visiting around among their relatives. That is the way I spent the holidays, dividing the time up among brothers and nephews. It was like taking a tour—two or three days in each house. Utterly delightful and exciting, but unsettling.

The role of childless aunt is very pleasant. An aunt is collateral in every sense of the word. She may be put up for security in an emergency such as baby-sitting, and she is a little offside always, never center—which is a rather enviable position. It prevents her from becoming possessive or exacting; it prevents her young people from feeling guilty. There is no umbilical cord of emotional dependency to be broken. It is a relaxed position on both sides, affectionate and devoted but not all absorbing. It has its points!

One night I was permitted to spend the evening alone with our youngest, Stuart, while his parents went to a party. It could scarcely be called baby-sitting, for it was the 3-year-old who looked after me.

He helped me unpack my suitcase and put away my things. I detest living out of a suitcase. I am like the woman who could not make a phone call from a public booth until she had hung glass curtains and brought in a cutleaf philodendron.

Stuart suggested that I drink some chocolate, but we settled for milk. The parakeet had to be taken out of his cage for a ride in the brilliantly painted wooden train. The bird behaved like an old commuter, settling down comfortably in the coal car.

A review of Stuart's favorite toys followed, after which he carefully selected a book for me to read to him. When I put him to bed, I offered to rub his back. "No," he said firmly, "I'm going to sleep." And he did. But first he directed me to cover up the parakeet.

I sat down in the living room with my favorite magazine, with Becky, the dog, at my feet. The birch logs burned in the fireplace behind the new brass screen. The bright ornaments on the lower boughs of the tree turned almost imperceptibly in perpetual slow motion, and the long silver filaments of tinsel waved slightly. The glowing tree was hypnotic. I saw another tree and another little blond boy, the father of Stuart. It wasn't so long ago. At least it didn't seem long to Stuart's great-aunt.

Peanut Brittle

Fables of the Famous

Once, when he was in training for a fight, he promised his manager that he would go on the wagon.

For a week, the manager did not see him take a drink. Then, one evening, he suspected that something was amiss. Bursting into Sullivan's room, he found the fighter drawing one from a barrel of beer.

"I thought you told me you were going to lay off the stuff!" he shouted.

"I was going to," explained John L., "but my doctor told me I needed beer for my strength."

"He did, did he?" said the other. "And do you feel any stronger now?"

"I sure do," replied Sullivan. "When this barrel was delivered yesterday I couldn't even budge it. Now I can lift it over my head."

The Professors' 'Slave Market'

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.

WHILE THE NEWSPAPER STRIKE was on we happened to wander into the Statler Hotel right smack into a convention of 6000 college and university professors who were holding a convention to discuss literature, modern languages and English. The convention, sponsored by the Modern Languages Association, took over the lobby and both mezzanines of the hotel.

ART BUCHWALD

Since we have never been to a college professors' convention before, we decided to look around. We asked a delegate where the press office of the convention was, and he guided us to the mezzanine where he introduced us to Prof. William Owens of Columbia, who was in charge of publicity.

Prof. Owens had organized a staff of 12 people to handle the press. The only trouble was that because of the strike no newspaper men showed up and Prof. Owens and his staff were sitting out a lonely vigil.

The excitement of a live newspaper man in the press office was hard to describe. Everyone went into action at once. We were given sheafs of press releases, bulletins and data. Press officers brought in press officers to see what a newspaper man looked like. People stared at us and a few wept openly.

"If we only had one more," said a journalism professor hopefully, "we could have a press conference."

But this was too much to hope for and instead we were shown around the premises. One of the functions of the convention was to make it possible for faculty members to find new teachers for their departments. Officially the program is called "Faculty Exchange"; unofficially it's known as the "Slave Market."

In one room faculty members sifted through applications of people who wanted jobs. In another room applicants stood around waiting for their names to be posted on a blackboard. If their names were posted, they went to a desk and picked up an appointment card. Then later the professor and applicant met for the interview. Since there is still a shortage in teachers and since the demand is great, the applicants can be choosy, and professors must go to great lengths to get their man.

One head of a department might have told the applicant, "You'll love our school. It's only 456 miles from Chicago, and our football team hasn't won a game in two years."

Most applicants are concerned about titles. They all want to be either assistant or associate professors. Where a school can't afford a large salary they'll try to make it up with a title. But if their budgets permit, they'll hire "instructors."

While talking to the head of the Slave Market, he said that most asking salaries were between $5000 and $7000. "But," he added, "one wise guy put down that he wanted $12,000 a year. There's always a smart aleck in every crowd."

What do they do at a professors' convention? They read papers just as they do at any convention. Some of the papers read were "The Autobiographical Matrix of Great Expectations," "The Semantic Value of OE ge—: A Re-Examination," "The Word Order of Noun Modifiers in Old English Charters," "Was Chaucer a Free Thinker?" and "Vocoder Output and Whispered Speech in a Tonal Language, Thai."

We discovered that professors of literature are known either by the century they teach or the great man they specialize in. When we were introduced to someone, we were told "This is Prof. Smith; he's a Seventeenth Century Man," or "This is Prof. Jones, she's a Medievalist." Several professors we met were "Contemporary Men" but you wouldn't have known it unless someone told you.

There is even a social strata among literature professors. Seventeenth Century and Contemporary are having a heyday now, while Eighteenth Century people are on the decline. Those who teach history or criticism rate well socially, but speech and drama teachers usually have to eat with the help. This information, incidentally, was given to us by a Seventeenth Century professor of history and criticism.

Professors do not have too much funds for entertainment at a convention and they are usually wined and dined by book publishers. There are cocktail parties galore and each publisher is pushing his line of textbooks as hard as he can.

But since even book publishers have limits on entertainment budgets, only those professors who write books or who have the authority to buy them are invited. As for the rest—there is a shop in the Statler which serves a very good cup of hot coffee.

Russian Dancers Feature Beauty, Not Brawn

Beryozka Company, Here Tonight and Tomorrow, Stresses Rigorous Training and Trim Figures

Speed and spirit mark this number by members of the Beryozka Russian Dance Company. It's called the "Troika," with the three girls representing horses and the scarf the curved wooden yoke characteristic of Russian harnessing.

MME. NADEZHDA NADEZHDINA, founder and director of the Beryozka troupe, sits surrounded by some of her dancers. She says, "I eat the goodies and grow fat for all of them."

By Virginia Irwin
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.

THERE HAS LONG BEEN a popular notion in this country that all Russian women are shaped like bushel baskets and have muscles like dock wallopers.

That idea is being gently laid to rest by 53 young, slim and lovely girls from the U.S.S.R., members of the Beryozka Russian Dance Company.

Now winding up a tour of eight United States cities, after a five weeks' engagement in New York, the Muscovite maidens will perform in St. Louis tonight and tomorrow night in Kiel Auditorium Opera House.

Brought here as part of the exchange agreement reached between the governments of the United States and the Soviet Union, the Beryozka company does not generate the excitement stirred up by the leaping, jumping, shouting acrobatic dancers of the Moiseyev Dance Company who took the United States by storm last spring. But the girls of the Beryozka troupe have a dancing charm all their own. They move through their rounds, squares and polkas with a precision that is exquisite to see.

Hand-picked by Mme. Nadezhda Nadezhdina, founder and director of the Beryozka troupe, the young women range in age from 17 to 29. They follow a rigorous training schedule between performances, watch their figures as jealously as Hollywood screen stars, and get plenty of sleep to keep the roses in their Russian cheeks. Mme. Nadezhdina discourages all drinking, frowns on smoking, and forbids the eating of candy, cake and ice cream.

"I eat the goodies and grow fat enough for all of them," Mme. Nadezhdina, a pleasant and generously proportioned woman, said with a chuckle. "I also smoke for the whole troupe, one cigarette after another. But taking care of herself is part of the career of every girl in the company."

When a girl joins Mme. Nadezhdina's troupe, she must audition for days, even weeks. The director takes only the best. All are graduates of the famed Bolshoi Theater School in Moscow.

"They begin their studies at the age of 10," Mme. Nadezhdina explained in fluent French. "And every dancer may go on dancing as long as she looks young and beautiful. They can go on until they are 50, but they must look like 20."

Since the Beryozka dancers specialize in folk reels, maidens' dances and folk dances, every artist in the troupe must meet special qualifications which Mme. Nadezhdina requires.

"Artists who work in folk arts must always remember three conditions," she explained. "First, they must love the peoples whose dances they present. Second, they must love the art of these peoples. And, third, they must see this art with the eyes of a poet. Add a little talent and skillfulness and you have something of beauty."

The Beryozka (birch-tree in Russian) company came into being just 10 years ago as the result of a folk festival in Moscow. In 1948 a group of collective farmers from the Kalinin region journeyed to Moscow for a rally of village amateur artists from all parts of the vast Soviet Union. The Kalinin group was headed by Nadezhda Nadezhdina, formerly of the Bolshoi Theater Ballet. Her folk dancers won the final round of the competition at the Bolshoi Theater and Mme. Nadezhdina was commissioned to form and direct a professional company. That organization, the Beryozka Russian Dance Company, has in the 10 years since its founding come to be recognized for its great artistry in dancing and has been acclaimed throughout the Soviet Union and in 22 other countries in which it appeared before its present visit to the United States.

The daughter of a Leningrad doctor, Mme. Nadezhdina says she "grew up with dancing in the heart." Her father and mother sent her to dancing school at an early age and although she became a member of the world-famed Bolshoi Ballet, her love of Russian folk dances was not dimmed by training in classical dancing. When illness interrupted her career at the Bolshoi, she returned to her early interest in arranging Russian folk dances.

As permanent artistic director and choreographer of the Beryozka company for the past 10 years, Mme. Nadezhdina created all the numbers in the company's repertoire. She takes her inspiration from ethnic sources, but the dances themselves are all original choreographic arrangements created by her.

"It is such a beautifully lyrical and poetic number," she sighs, "but then each number on the program has in it a little piece of my soul."

Like women the world over, Mme. Nadezhdina and her dancers have spent the spare time of their trip on shopping sprees. Mme. Nadezhdina wants to buy an "American fur coat, something different" from what her friends back in Moscow are wearing.

She also wants to take back with her "a live dog, an American-born Pekinese."

"I have five Pekinese at home already," she laughed. "But this American one I shall name 'Uncle Sam' and call him Sammy or Cyomka in Russian. Then I shall say to my other dogs, 'See, now you must love your American brother.'"

How Big Is 'Too Big' for High School?

By Fred M. Hechinger

QUESTION: We have a high school of which everybody is proud. It has about 500 or 600 students, and I have always thought that this is a great advantage in comparison with those giant schools in the big cities. But now there is talk about consolidating our school district with two others and to build an addition to the high school so that students from two neighboring towns can attend too. I think this is all wrong. I'm against bigness.

ANSWER: I'm against bigness, too—when it gets to be too big. But how big is too big? The problem with your school is that it is too small—or, at least, it probably is.

How can you tell? Dr. James B. Conant, former president of Harvard University, has just completed a two-year study of the American high schools all over the country. One of his most urgent recommendations is to do away with all high schools that are too small.

What is too small? Dr. Conant says: any high school with a graduating class of fewer than 100 students (and yours probably has between 80 and 100).

Why? Because it cannot afford to offer the necessary laboratories, teaching staff, language studies, etc. A good high school program requires a lot of highly trained specialists, and very few small schools can afford to hire enough of them.

Consolidation is the answer, even if it sometimes hurts the local pride. But you can be just as proud of the bigger school.

By the way, Dr. Conant found that out of a total of 21,000 high schools all over America, only about 4000 are big enough. That means about one-third of all high-school students go to schools with inadequate programs.

Of course, don't go to the other extreme. A school can be too big. A high school with between 1500 and 1800 students is about right, except in very large cities where it is sometimes impossible to hold schools below a total of several thousand.

QUESTION: Our daughter Ellen is a high-school junior. Her school offers a lot of elective courses. We know very little about education and can't tell her what to take. She has only seen her guidance counselor for five minutes, and the counselor tells her that she has been doing well and therefore he cannot spend much time with her. This seems very wrong. What should we do?

ANSWER: It is very wrong—and, unfortunately, it is happening in too many cases. Guidance counselors are simply overworked. One of these experts should not have more than 250 to 300 students to deal with, but more often than not, they must take care of three and four times that number.

The answer is more guidance people. When your citizens committee meets next time, make sure that this item is at the top of the priority list. That's why it is so important for people like yourself to take an active part in school and civic affairs.

Meanwhile, you still have an immediate problem, and here is what to do: if Ellen has a teacher in your school whom you trust and in whom you believe, ask for a special conference, if necessary after school hours. (You might offer a dinner invitation for added leisure). Then discuss Ellen's problem fully and let her make her choice accordingly.

If there is no such teacher (but I hope there is), make an appointment with the principal. Whatever you do, don't let Ellen just drift.

Social Problems

DEAR MRS. POST: I would very much appreciate your opinion on the following matter: The other evening a friend and I went into a restaurant for dinner. We were shown to a table and handed a menu. I discovered that we were sitting in a draft and suggested to my friend that we move to another table. When the waiter came back to take our order and saw that we had changed our table he seemed quite perturbed. Were we in the wrong?

Answer: No, but you might have said something like the following to the waiter, "Sorry, but we have moved to this table because there was a draft at the other one."

DEAR MRS. POST: My girl is 8 years old and I am expecting another child soon. Would it be proper to send announcements for this one also? My husband does not think we should send them out, but I can't see why the arrival of this second baby is any less important than the first.

Answer: I think it is true that the arrival of a first baby is always momentous news. Reports of others are taken each time more casually. However, there is no rule against sending announcements no matter how many times there may be occasion to do so. In this particular case it seems to me that after eight years, a second baby would cause quite as much interest as did the first.

Two Engagements Are Made Known

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

TWO OUT-OF-TOWN ENGAGEMENTS, announced within the last few days are of interest here. One is that of Miss Mary Josephine Garrett Lee, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rensselaer Lee of Princeton, N.J., have told friends of her approaching marriage to Cyril Muromcew.

MISS REDFEARN . . . Prospective Bride.

Miss Lee's mother is the former Miss Stella Garrett, a St. Louisan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Garrett, whose home was at 29 Kingsbury place. Miss Lee's other grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Herbert Lee of Philadelphia.

For many years Mr. and Mrs. Lee have had a summer home at Edgartown, on Martha's Vineyard, Mass. Their daughter attended Miss Fine's School in Princeton and was graduated from Chatham Hall, Chatham, Va., and Smith College. She is a niece of Mrs. Stanley Tuthill (Caroline Garrett) and Mrs. Robert Perkins Brown (Josephine Garrett).

Mr. Muromcew, at present a member of the United States Delegation on Disarmament Plans in Geneva, is the son of Mrs. Alexander Muromcew of New York, formerly of Bialystok, Poland, and the late Mr. Muromcew. He served with the British Eighth Army in World War II and was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1955.

IN GREENVILLE, S.C., Mrs. Theron Lee Redfearn has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Patricia Lee Redfearn, to William Henry Trotter Bush. The prospective bridegroom is the son of United States Senator Prescott Bush of Connecticut, and a nephew of James Smith Bush, St. Louis. His mother was Miss Dorothy Walker, daughter of Mrs. George Herbert Walker of New York and the late Mr. Walker. The Walkers also formerly lived here. The wedding is to take place in August.

Miss Redfearn, a junior at Vassar College, is a graduate of St. Catherine's School, Richmond, Va., and Bennett Junior College, Millbrook, N.Y. She was presented in Rye, N.Y., at a supper dance given by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Pierce, and in New York at the Debutante Assembly and New Year's ball. She is a provisional member of the New York Junior League.

Mr. Bush, a graduate of Hotchkiss School, Lakeville, Conn., is a junior at Yale and belongs to Saybrook College and Fence Club.

Sixth Pre-Symphony Lecture-Luncheon.

THE WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will present the sixth pre-Symphony lecture Friday from 1 until 1:30 o'clock in the Chase Club of the Chase Hotel. Harold Blumenfeld, associate professor of music at Washington, will speak.

As has been the custom this year, the lecture will be preceded by a buffet luncheon to be served from noon until 1 o'clock in the Chase Club.

Seated with Mr. Blumenfeld will be Mrs. Wallace R. Persons Jr., vice president of the Women's Association in charge of the Maintenance Fund Drive, and her assistant chairman, Mrs. William I. Pixley; Mrs. Robert A. Black, chairman of the Projects Committee and her assistant, Mrs. Walter Graul, who is responsible for fashion shows for the luncheons, and William Zalken. During the luncheon a style show will be presented by Montaldo's.

Dolan-Schweiss Wedding Jan. 31.

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Maryanne Frances Schweiss and Joseph Anthony Dolan will take place at 11 o'clock the morning of Jan. 31 at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Clayton. Later her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Schweiss, 8132 Pershing avenue, Clayton, will give a breakfast at Norwood Hills Country Club.

Mrs. Robert E. Hannegan Jr. will act as matron of honor while Mrs. Thomas E. Caestecker, Evanston, Ill., Miss Joan Randazzo, Mrs. John F. Schweiss, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, and Miss Sharon Ann Brown will be bridesmaids. Mr. Dolan will announce his attendants later.

Parties for the bride-elect started Nov. 23 with a champagne breakfast given by Mr. and Mrs. Caestecker. Dec. 30 Mrs. Harry Berger, 125 Frontenac, has planned a luncheon and shower and Jan. 13 a similar party will be given by Mrs. John J. Goebel, Mrs. Stewart Meyer and Mrs. F. James McKenna II at Mrs. Goebel's home, 5507 Waterman avenue.

Jan. 17 Miss Randazzo and Miss Rosalind Houss will give a cocktail supper at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Randazzo, Ladue road, Creve Coeur. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Schweiss will be host and hostess Jan. 24 at a cocktail supper at their home, 1414 Westwind drive, St. Louis county. Mrs. Hannegan has scheduled the spinster dinner Jan. 28 at her home, 50 Highgate road, Olivette, and the prospective bridegroom's stepfather, Jack Wiseman, will give the rehearsal dinner the next night at a place to be announced later.

Miss Janet Sweeney Engaged.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Sweeney, 15 South Rockhill road, Webster Groves, of the engagement of their daughter Miss Janet Carol Sweeney, to John S. Hancock of Cleveland Heights, O.

MISS SWEENEY . . . To Be Summer Bride.

The bride-elect is a senior at DePauw University and a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. She has traveled extensively in Europe and spent many summers at Newbury, N.H., where her parents have a summer home on Lake Sunapee.

Mr. Hancock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford S. Hancock of Cleveland Heights, also is a senior at DePauw where he is president of his fraternity, Sigma Chi. In June he will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Force. The wedding will take place late in the summer.

Martha Carr's
OPINION

A Domineering Dad

Dear Martha:

WE HAVE THREE SWEET CHILDREN—3, 6, and a baby 12 months old. My husband is very mean to them and he is always yelling at them and whipping them for no reason. They are getting very nervous and sick. They are afraid to go near him. He never loves them or takes them for a ride. All children need love and care. I am getting very nervous and sick on account of his domineering and hateful ways. People tell me he is a big show-off and thinks he is better than the next one. Please, what can I do?

BROKEN-HEARTED MOTHER.

He may think he's better than others, but he's a long way from proving it. Of course, children need love and care, and they also need someone to stand up for them against abuse and neglect. So if you feel you can't take their part—and I can certainly understand why you're ill and nervous—by all means seek professional help from one of the family agencies. It's time someone knocked a little sense into his head about how to discipline children.

Dear Martha:

A LETTER published recently in your column, signed "Disgusted" and telling about a wife who was a poor housekeeper, keeps coming to my mind. Does it ever occur to these husbands that their attitude might well be the cause of boredom and nervousness in their wives? I'm not referring to couples who have real problems such as drinking, infidelity and gambling, but to those who seemingly just don't apply themselves in making the most of their marriage. I believe a man should be kind and considerate of his wife but should expect and insist on her doing her part to please him. Instead of letting the little gal get the idea that she knows all the answers and bog down under such a load, a man should know she's human the same as he, and should assert himself. The EASY way is to turn his back on her, to let her go out alone or let himself start thinking of getting away from it all. That indicates a lack of interest on his part, a reluctance to exert himself to improve the situation. I am the mother of four boys and my home and family have gotten out of hand on occasion. A wishy-washy man can be the discouraging cause. Dodging decisions, whether it is putting his foot down on his children, wife, himself, or even the family pet. True, a man may be weary when he returns home, but if he's smart, before he puts away his thinking cap and dons his slippers, he'd do well to take care of the problems at home as they arise. The head of the house sets the pace and no woman is cut out to be the head of a house. The sooner our men realize that and let their women know they do, the sooner a lot of good marriages will become happier ones. MY OPINION.

IN ANSWER TO Betty Sue: You were right in addressing your Christmas card to both your employer and his wife, even though you do not know her personally.

Would you like to teach your own children, or perhaps your Sunday School class, prayers which even the youngest can say? Martha Carr's free leaflet of children's prayers will give you many suggestions. You may have one for each child if you wish. The leaflet also contains graces to be said at table. Write today for your copy, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Russian Rocket

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.

THE EXCITING NEWS over the past weekend was the Russian cosmic rocket, now claimed to be approaching the point where it will go into orbit around the sun.

The Russians have a gift for propagandizing well whatever they do, and they are already talking about a future lunar expedition. Just what would be discovered by this venture I am too ignorant to really understand, but I hope it serves the good of humanity and is not looked upon entirely as something that may or may not be of military value.

LAST FRIDAY NIGHT I saw "J.B.," the play written by Archibald MacLeish. It certainly has a tremendous impact and it is very well acted, but I don't know that I liked "God" upon the stage.

I kept thinking that I would rather read this play than actually see it acted, and yet I realized that it had a tremendous effect which perhaps one would not experience quite in the same way in reading it.

The cry for justice, the effort at understanding one's individual failures, the acceptance of merging one's own personality in that of the world—each thought, it seemed to me, required long thinking through by itself.

I came away with a great admiration for what Mr. MacLeish had done but with a feeling that my share of what he wished to accomplish was very far from being really understood by me, or thought through by me as yet.

A CORRESPONDENT from the Middle West writes to me suggesting that it would help democracy in this country if we saw to it that every organization—and I take it that he means every membership organization—actually voted on all the policies of the organization.

He seems to object to the idea that many organizations before stating what they think is the consensus of the majority of their members do not actually poll them. In this regard, he feels, they fail to use their organizations as means for emphasizing the need of practicing democracy. And through practicing democracy in every phase of our lives he feels we would learn more about it and use it to become better citizens of our country.

While we have a representative republic we pride ourselves on being a democracy in which the individual accepts responsibility for his government through the choice of representatives. My correspondent is a little confused, I think, between organizations and religious groups.

I doubt if any civic or political organization functions as do the Quakers, for instance, and carries its religious methods into their activities in the way that this religious body does.

He contends that such groups are paternalistic and anti-democratic. I cannot quite see that point, but I can see that we do not always use our various membership organizations to improve our understanding and habit of participation and responsibility as democratic citizens. And this, I think, is an idea that we should bear in mind.

I pass it on to you as food for thought.

By James Bacon

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 7 (AP). NOBU McCARTHY is a fetching Japanese actress with an Irish name—an oriental paradox.

Nobu is Jerry Lewis's love interest in "Geisha Boy," a part she almost didn't get because she looked too Japanese on her first audition.

She showed up wearing a Japanese kimono, the costume that she wears in the picture. Lewis and director Frank Tashlin turned her down.

"I can see why," says Nobu, "because I never wore kimonos much until I came to America. We only wore them on New Year's in Tokyo. They are much more popular here."

Two weeks later, Nobu showed up at Lewis's office in sleek American clothes. He and Tashlin took one look and signed her.

"They wanted to change my name to Nobu Atsumi, my maiden name, but I refused. Then I asked Jerry if he could remember the name of the Japanese girl who played Marlon Brando's love in 'Sayonara.' He couldn't, so I said: 'There, that proves it. All Japanese names sound alike to Americans. But Nobu McCarthy, that's a name you can remember.'"

She is married to David McCarthy, an American G.I. whom she met when she was one of Tokyo's top fashion models.

Nobu is full of paradoxes. Although reared in Japan, she was born in Ottawa, Canada, and her parents and four brothers now live in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Another paradox:

NOBU McCARTHY

A CBS official spotted her. He told her to call on him the next day. She did and got herself signed for a new private eye TV series.

"I don't know how a CBS man got into an NBC party," says Nobu, "but my husband says, 'Don't ask questions. Just show up for the audition.'"

She's only been here two years but has become thoroughly Americanized. She thinks women get a better break here than in Japan—although the status of women has improved greatly since the war.

"In Japan," says Nobu, "the woman must always walk behind the man. The first thing I noticed here, especially in the department stores, was the man walking behind the woman."

She cooks for her husband, who owns an embroidery firm, but confesses she seldom cooks Japanese dishes.

Prejudice That Faces Woman in the Pulpit

By Gay Pauley

NEW YORK (UPI).

WOMEN have cracked the prejudice barriers in engineering, medicine and law. They have been accepted as plumbers, bus drivers and United States senators, bank presidents, brokers and paper hangers. But there is one major field they cannot seem to conquer—the ministry.

In the course of 2000 years, women have managed to chip away at some of the prejudices against them in the pulpit, but they still have a long way to go to be accepted as preachers to the degree they are encouraged to stand over hot stoves preparing church suppers.

The National Council of Churches reported in its 1958 yearbook that there are fewer than 7000 women ministers in the United States, out of a total 168,419 clergymen.

Of these, 5791 women are ordained or licensed. Only 2896 actually have pulpits—and these are mainly in small towns.

There are several women circuit riders. They travel from church to church. One drives a station wagon on her circuit. Another paddles a rowboat from island to island off the coast of Maine. Still another jogs through the northwoods of Michigan on horseback.

But the closest a woman minister has come to official status in a big New York City church is to marry the pastor and serve as his assistant on a strictly non-preaching basis. She is Mrs. Donald Harrington, wife of the minister of the Community Church, in midtown Manhattan.

The Rev. Ellen B. Shaw, of Mazomanie, Wis., president of the American Association of Women Ministers, says there is a need for more ministers and that women can fill this need very well.

"So why should they not be used more than they are?" she asked. "Every person has their place to fill in life, whether male or female, and women can fill the ministry efficiently. Therefore, she should be used more than she is."

She added that the prejudice against women ministers is decreasing, however, more in some parts of the country than in others.

"I think that perhaps in the field of counseling, women have an unusual function," she said. "It is an increasingly important part of the ministry. Perhaps it is because it is easier for people to tell their problems to a woman than to a man."

Mrs. Shaw has been licensed to preach since 1939, but did not have a church of her own until 1942. She has been preaching every Sunday since that time, and her husband also is a preacher. They trade pulpits every Sunday.

"As far as talents," she said, "I do not believe women surpass in any talent but do equal the men often. In this matter again, I do not think it is a comparison of male with female. It is that an individual has abilities, and if they feel God has called them, they should enter the ministry."

Words, Wit And Wisdom

By William Morris

"THERE has been a certain coolness around our house," writes a Milwaukee miss, "ever since my boy friend used the phrase 'Tell it to the Marines' and went on to say that the reason why this expression was so widely used in the services is that everyone knows that marines are so dumb that they'll believe anything. What Tommy didn't know is that my dad is an ex-marine. Can you help me patch things up?"

As a matter of fact, yes. You see this expression started in the British armed forces in the late eighteenth century. I suggest your boy friend amend his remark by telling your father that of course he meant British marines. But he'd still better be ready to duck. Every marine I evre met had a quick temper and a fierce pride in the corps.

Relaxation is Only Cure For Headaches Doctors Say

If you can relax, you can probably overcome your own headaches, doctors report. Most headaches arise from emotional tensions and only relaxation can cure them. But, if you can't relax, you may be one who can benefit by a remarkable new treatment. Its ingredients are being prescribed for millions today. It is safe, non-habit-forming and not only gives fast relief from headaches, but eases the tensions that cause them—the pressure-swollen blood vessels, tight neck muscles, and other sources of the discomfort.
This modern defense against man's ancient enemy, the common headache, is known as SAL-FAYNE. It is now available in pink capsule form without prescription at your favorite drug counter. Get it today.

'Big Brother Look'

The "big brother look" has replaced father-son styles in boys' wear, says Manny Eagle, president of the Boys' Apparel and Accessories Manufacturers association. Young lads follow high school and college boy styles. Outerwear comes in solid colors rather than plaids this year. Dress trousers generally are darker, but slacks for casual wear come in off-beat colors.

A Dutch Purchase

By Ramon Coffman

THE DUTCH performed a fine deed after starting their settlements in the Hudson valley. They paid the Indians for the land they occupied. Among all the countries which sent settlers to the New World, Holland was the first to purchase land from the natives.

The purchase of Manhattan Island is a famous event in history. Peter Minuit, the governor of New Amsterdam, called the chiefs of several Indian tribes together. He told them that he wanted to pay for the land on which Dutch homes were being built.

After a friendly exchange of words, it was agreed that the Dutch should give various tools and other objects for the land. It has been figured that the goods turned over to the Indians had a value of $24.

That would seem like a bargain price, but we must remember that the value of Manhattan Island was small in those days compared to what it is now. No one knew that it would become, some day, the central part of one of the great cities of the world.

Now I should like to take up a little point about the purchase price. What would have happened if $24 had been lent at interest 333 years ago?

If a sum is lent at 6 per cent interest, and if the interest is figured yearly, the money will double itself once in 12 years.

If the $24 paid by the Dutch had been lent at 6 per cent interest, and if interest had been paid on the interest, the original amount would have grown to more than two and a half billion (25 hundred million) dollars by the present year!

If you want to become rich, all you need to do is to invest $24 on those terms, and to live for the next three and a third centuries.
